COURT TAKES ACTION IN POUREN'S BEHALF

U. S. JUDGE ORDERS PROCEEDINGS STOPPED IN CASE OF RUSSIAN REFUGEE.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Judge Ward, in the United States Circuit Court today handed down an order restraining United States Commissioner Shields from taking any further action in the case of Jan Pouren, self Pouren, the Russian political refugee held in the Tombs in charge of murder, arson and other crimes, until the commissioner can pass upon habeas corpus proceedings and show cause why a writ of prohibition should not be issued forbidding him to proceed any further with the matter.

Attorneys for the Russian Imperial Government, which is making a hard fight to extradite Pouren on criminal grounds, are preparing to continue the legal battle for the courts.

To-day's action by Judge Ward means that unless Commissioner Shields can show good reasons to the contrary, Pouren will be released at once.

A petition signed by a hundred thousand of Pouren's countrymen, and the active interests of the leaders of the revolutionary movement on this side, forced the State Department to reopen the case and grant a new hearing after Counselor Shields had decided that Pouren must be returned.

KING INDICTED FOR MURDER IN SECOND DEGREE

Special to the Boston American.

CLINTON, Oct. 22.—An indictment for murder in the second degree was returned to-day by the Worcester County Grand Jury against Arthur King, who yesterday morning shot and killed the Armenian pedlar, Ayd George Azeen, in the house of Mrs. George N. Clements.

Mrs. Clements and Thomas Ryan, who was present at the shooting, have been held in $500 bail as witnesses.

In the District Court King was arraigned, waived the reading of the complaint and was held without bail for a hearing next Thursday. King was represented in court by Attorney Thomas L. Walsh.

The police made no complaint against Mrs. Clements. At the request of the police chief, Mrs. Clements and Thomas Ryan were held as witnesses. Ryan was then arraigned on the charge of drunkenness, pleaded guilty and was held for a hearing next Wednesday.

Chief of Police Murphy, acting under orders from Deputy Attorney George F. Taft, took Mrs. Clements and Ryan to Worcester to appear before the Grand Jury.

Judge Smith, acting upon request from Medical Examiner Polsey, to-day ordered an inquest into the death of Ayd George Azeen held in the local court on October 30.

$10,000,000 DIVIDEND BY STANDARD OIL

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The directors of Standard Oil Company will meet next week for action on dividends. The regular rate of $10 a share for the quarter, equivalent to a distribution of $10,000,0001, will in all likelihood be agreed upon.

Standard Oil Company in first quarter of next year will probably declare $15 a share, equivalent to about $15,000,0000. This means that within the next four months Standard Oil shareholders will receive nearly $25,000,0000 in dividends.

The total disbursements of Standard Oil Company in the current year will aggregate $39,335,320. The company over the last seven years has disbursed $270,258,9980 to shareholders. Net profits available for dividends within that period were $353,262,974, partly estimated, so that after dividends there was a surplus of $230,004,994.

While Standard Oil Co. has spent a great deal of money for construction work and other purposes, it is safe to assume that the greater part of the surplus accumulated over the last seven years is in the form of securities and cash. A large part of it is distributed among the various subsidiary companies.

The net profits of the Standard Oil Co. since 1882, including the current year, will reach almost $1,000,000,000.

TOKIO EN FETE FOR SAILORS OF YANKEE FLEET

Continual Round of Celebration From Morning Until Late at Night.

Special Cable to Boston American.

TOKIO, Oct. 22.—The American sailors took possession of this city early to-day, and before evening had more fun than they ever dreamed could be found in the land of the Mikado. From eight in the morning until 10 in the evening there was a continual round of festivities. At noon the Americans were taken in charge by the Mayor and his aides and given an elaborate luncheon, which was attended by Admiral Sperry, Ambassador O'Brien and the embassy's staff.

At one o'clock the bluejackets and marines were given a picnic in Hibya Park, where every form of entertainment imaginable was enjoyed by the Americans.

While the American officers and men were being entertained by a garden party at the British Embassy, nearly twenty thousand Japanese thronged past the embassy in torchlight procession, their banners being decorated with the American flag.

MORSE JUROR ILL, GUARDED AT OWN HOME

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The trial of Charles W. Morse and Alfred H. Curtis, president of Morse's National Bank of North America, was abruptly stopped today by the sudden illness of Juror No. 9, Gordon Wendell, of No. 126 East Thirty-fifth street, who had to be taken home in a carriage.

A United States deputy marshal and a Secret Service agent accompanied the sick man and located on keeping guard over him inside his own home. This is an almost unprecedented proceeding.

The action was taken by order of Assistant District Attorney Stimson, who has all the jurors under special surveillance ever since the trial began.

The two guards will be quartered in Mr. Wendell's house until he is able to resume his duty as a juror.

BITTEN BY DOG, DIES OF RABIES

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—After suffering four days from agrophobia, David Wayman, five years old, died at Bellevue Hospital today. Young Waxman was playing on his father's cattle farm near Bayonne, N. J., four weeks ago, when he was bitten by a stray dog. He was taken to his home and the wound was cauterized. Nothing more was thought of the bite until last Saturday, when, as the child was washing his face, he suddenly became barking.

KELIHER FOR MAYOR NEXT?

Voters who remember the history of Ninth District politics for ten years past will not forget that the political advancement of John A. Keliher has been very costly to the Democratic party in Boston. They will remember the betrayal of Jeremiah J. McNamara of South Boston in a certain Councillor deal in order to send Mr. Keliher to the Senate.

Is it profitable for the party, as a whole, for the Ninth District to give the unprecedented honor of a fourth term to a man whose ambitions have disrupted the district several times?

Will it be the Mayoralty office after Congress in the case of Mr. Keliher?

REPORT SCORES SLAIN IN BALKAN BATTLES

ACTUAL WARFARE BETWEEN AUSTRIANS AND INSURGENTS SAID TO BE IN PROGRESS.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Actual warfare between 120,000 Austrian troops and thousands of insurrectionists in Bosnia and Herzegovina has been in progress ten days, according to startling information brought to Lor on to-day by a Montenegrin agent who is here to investigate the exact course that England will pursue in case Servia and Montenegro declare war against Austria.

This agent declares that guerilla warfare has been raging in the mountains of the annexed provinces since Austria's bold stroke early in the month, and that the situation is so dangerous that Austria is now rushing reinforcements to her provincial armies.

Scores have been killed, according to the Montenegrin, and a state of anarchy exists in the eastern and southern sections of the annexed territory.

Austria is exercising the strictest censorship and has been able to keep the real situation from the world. Even all outgoing mails are opened and examined, and it is impossible to learn the true situation without being actually on the scene.

SHUT IN CABIN, DIES BY FIRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Locked in the cabin of the snow Peter, in which he had been made prisoner because he objected to the cabin and locked in. In their absence Captain August set the cabin afire, either in revenge or drunken rage.

FINED ONE CENT FOR THRASHING BEGGAR

Frank Pasquale, who appeared in the police court to-day with the complaint that he had been attacked by Frank Ryan when he asked the latter for money, was fined $10 by Judge Ely, while Ryan was allowed to go with a fine of one cent. The evidence showed that Pasquale had asked Ryan for money, and when the latter refused attacked him. Ryan was too strong for Pasquale.

MAYOR WARNS CITY CHIEFS

A vigorous warning was sent to-day by the heads of city departments by Mayor Weaver of Cambridge for retrenchment.

The Mayor says he is informed that the letter of June 4, in which he set the financial storm signals, has not been productive of that caution which he hoped for and that while six months of the year have passed every department head has exceeded far more than half of his appropriation.

The city of Cambridge has an expert accountant, Mr. Harvey Chase, now at work on its books with the hope of finding what is the reason why it is so near the bankrupt stage. Mr. Chase's report calls for $1,000 for his diagnosis of the case.

DORCHESTER REAL ESTATE MAN DEAD

Henry W. Hubard, one of the best-known real estate and foremost real estate dealers of Dorchester, died at his home, No. 29 Melbourne street, Dorchester, last night, after a brief illness. Mr. Hubbard was born 68 years old, and has resided in Dorchester all his life.

State Police Begin Investigation of Series of Disasters That Has Caused Reign of Terror—To Hunt Down Firebugs.

Aroused by the conditions which the wave of arson has brought about in Chelsea, Deputy Chief Neal of the State police this afternoon ordered an inquest on the Feinberg fire. This investigation will probably extend to all the recent fires in Chelsea.

Alexander Feinberg, who owned the stable which was burned Tuesday and the horses which the firebug, with fiendish cruelty had first saturated with kerosene, his wife and the tenants of the adjoining buildings, were called to the State House.

There is a reign of terror in Chelsea. Evidence multiplies that the city is the victim of an epidemic of incendiarism. The state police, the police of Chelsea, the fire department and the Center Board of Control declare that a gang of firebugs, one of the most desperate which has ever operated in the East, is back of the series of fires which have devastated the city.

The citizens are in a state of dread and apprehension. It has become common for one member of a family to stay up nights to guard against fire. Any sound in the street which is in the least degree alone loud enough to cause the occupants of a house to rush out in alarm. And the ringing of the fire gongs is followed inevitably by a small panic. Business is injured, and men in the workshops work with half a mind. The talk is of fires, fires everywhere, still.

Millions in Property Loss.

Here in the record of Chelsea's last seven months:

The "Big" fire of Sunday, April 12th $12,000,000
The fire of September 21st $1,000,000
Incendiary destruction of the Lester K. Hustad laundry, Elm and Maple streets, October 19th $40,000
The attempt on the Feinberg stables $5,000

On May 3 an attempt was made to burn the house at No. 27 Pine street. A quantity of paper saturated with oil was placed in a pail, and on top of this several boxes of matches had been emptied. This was placed under the clapboards, which had also been smeared with oil. Then to make his work certain the firebug rang in a false alarm from a distant box to keep the engines away. Something interfered with his plans, and the preparations for the fire were discovered before he ignited the pile.

The night found that the house backing up to No. 27 Pine street had also been set afire, but the blaze had burned slowly and died out. Several neighbors testified having seen three men loitering about the place.

Some authorities say that not less than twenty small fires during the last seven months have been the work of firebugs. In most cases the loss has been small, but in almost every instance the fire was in a residential section where loss of life was inevitable had the flames spread.

Work of a Gang of Firebugs.

Deputy Chief George Neal of the State Police in charge of fire investigation, said to-day:

"These fires are not the work of a single firebug. I do not accept that theory. These fires have been started by several individuals. There have been several fires of this kind since the big one of April 12, and these will probably be more.

"There was a fire in the Sandy Smith and Everett line and we have a wind like that of the April fire, the whole district will go. Nothing but brick walls at interval can prevent such a fire.

"When we investigated the big fire of April we had witnesses to establish the firebug theory. That fire was deliberately planned. How else can you account for the breaking out of fire after fire at thousand feet intervals. Prominent business men gave us absolute proof that many of these fires were incendiary.

Familiar with the Premises.

Alexander Feinberg, whose stables were destroyed Tuesday, and where the incendiary first poured oil on the horses, said to-day that whoever pulled off that trick was familiar with the premises. He said he had been in the stable at 5:30 o'clock Tuesday and at that time locked every door, including a side door with a secret lock. During the fire he went through the premises and found this side door open. This proves, he says, that the firebug was thoroughly familiar with the premises.

Chief Josiah Whitney of the State Police has detailed every man he can spare to the district with orders to get the guilty persons and spare no expense. His men swarm through the threatricken territory.

William E. McClintock, chairman of the Board of Control, has dropped all other business.

"I have started machinery," he said today, "which will, almost surely place the guilt where it belongs. We have been the victims of atrocious arson. Nothing else can be thought of until we capture this gang. I cannot say just what my plan is. But it will be effective. You can say that to reassure our people. The fire of Tuesday last seems to have been incited by revenge. It shows, however, the dastardly spirit which is behind all these attempts. I have a large corps of men working along one specific line and results will soon appear. We'll get the firebugs though, just as sure as I am chairman of the Board of Control.

Cause of the Big Fire.

Judge Cutler of the Chelsea Court filed his report of the inquest into the cause of the conflagration of April 12, which caused an estimated loss of $12,000,000 on October 16th. He fixed the blame on Israel Sanitsky, foreman in the rag-picking establishment of Rubin brothers. Sanitsky, Judge Cutler reported, was proved by his own admission to have been smoking cigarettes as they worked over great piles of dried rags, material almost as inflammable as powder. Morris Sam Ibit, Judge Cutler reported, on every day has carried on in violation of the Sunday laws.

The cancelling of some $400,000 of fire insurance by Chelsea has increased the jobbing business of R. S. Hoffman, an insurance broker at No. 4 Killby street, Boston, to-day.

TOO AMBITIOUS, Reports that the cancellation of the policies of the Buffalo Commercial and the Buffalo German fire insurance companies of Buffalo were due to the ambitious plans of Manager Young of Boston all over the country to reduce liabilities. He did not think Chelsea was conspicuous in this respect.

The cancelling of which have reduced their Chelsea business are the Milwaukee Mechanics, Milwaukee, Wis.; the Dubuque Fire and Marine, Dubuque, and the Farmers' Fire, both of Texas.

Chief Henry Spencer of the fire department, says not a little of the blame for the existing conditions can be placed on those very insurance companies.

Water Front in Danger.

"They try to tell you that it was the inefficient fire department," he said. "If they had been a little more cautious in the risks they placed here would have been fewer fires. In their mad rush for premiums they took insurance business that a schoolboy would have rejected. Now they try to blame others for their stupidity."

1,000 Extra Added With Each Order for Thirty Sunday Americans.

WATCH FOR THE FULL LIST

Upwards of 100,000 ballots have been cast in the BOSTON AMERICAN Free European Tour contest for Sunday school teachers of Boston and suburbs.

There are about 350 teachers entered.

Additional ballots and new entries are being received every day, and there will be a fund of surprises when the list is published again next Sunday.

WATCH AND IT.

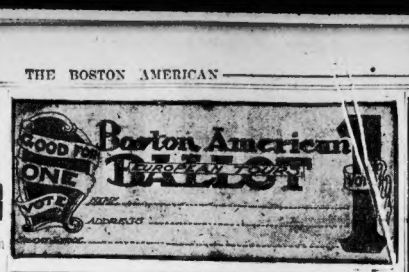
Candidates and their friends are becoming more familiar every day with the plan for casting special ballots, whereby extra votes can be procured in thousand lots, and the result is that the voting by special ballot has taken a wonderful stride in the past few days.

The voting schedule is simple and easy to understand. For every thirty SUNDAY AMERICANS ordered through the European Tour Department 1,000 extra votes are given. The paper will be delivered for thirty consecutive Sundays at ONE address and the extra votes will be credited to any teacher desired.

To get the extra votes, however, the order must come direct to the European Tour Department, and not through agents or newsdealers, or through carrier boys. No extra votes WILL NOT BE ALLOWED.

The heavy voting for this week will begin to-day, and it would be advisable for all candidates to get their votes in early.

Next Sunday's list will show the vote up to 2 p. m. Saturday.



NEW LETTERS TO DISPUTE MRS. HAINS'S STORY

Notes From Army Officer Alleged to Show That She Admitted Indiscretion.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Mrs. Peter C. Hains, Jr., will not be called upon to testify against her husband, the army officer, who, with his brother, T. Jenkins Hains, is charged with the murder of William E. Annis on August 16 last.

District Attorney Darrin has decided not to call Mrs. Hains to give testimony which might sway the balance in favor of the life of her husband and his brother may rest with Mr. McIntyre, whose case is conducting the defence, is not expected to call Mrs. Hains either, and unless there are unlooked-for developments the young wife will not be a witness.

A letter which lawyers for the defence say will disprove the recent statement of Mrs. Hains despite the unexpected effect which Annis is in possession of General Peter C. Hains's resignation as president. This letter is said to have been written voluntarily by Lieutenant-Colonel Annis to the army, and was addressed to Captain Hains soon after the latter's return from the Philippines. In the letter it is declared that Andrews, who knew of the trouble between Hains and his wife, begged Hains to desert his family and marry Miss Hains, and added that Mrs. Hains had told him she meant to "turn over a new leaf."

Mrs. A. Birch Field, wife of an advertising man who was in the Bayside Yacht Club when Hains shot Annis, and who witnessed the killing, is expected to be an important witness for the prosecution. Tactful handling of Mrs. Field's developments should in part wipe out the injury for the defence say circumstances that Mrs. Hains shot a man in her husband's office under an assumed name. The books kept by this hotel to be produced in the trial will testify to it. It is said, the identity of a Mrs. Anderson and of Miss Peterson, a nurse, now that the bills for the week's expenses were paid by Hains.

SOUVENIR DAYS AT BOSTON FAIR

The management of the Boston Food Fair in the Park Square Coliseum has appointed duplex souvenir days for every day this week, beginning to-day. Each morning this week a complete piano score of Sousa's latest march, "The Fairest of the Fair," will be given to the first 500 ladies entering admission dockets after the opening of the fair at 10 o'clock.

In order to accommodate the many who are unable to get to the fair before afternoon, the other souvenir will be presented to the first 1,000 ladies purchasing admission tickets after 1 o'clock. The souvenir is a full-size package of F. & L. Mascaval.

The fair was made doubly interesting to visitors this afternoon by the attendance of several hundred pupils from the Perkins Institution and Massachusetts School for the blind.

Tomorrow morning the first 1,000 ladies purchasing admission tickets will be presented articles of jewelry from the Arthur H. Neal & Co. exhibit, consisting of lorgnon, scarfpins, neck chains, etc. On Saturday morning the first 500 ladies will receive a bag of the Russell "Regular" flour. These are extra souvenirs.

The feature of this evening's concert, when Meisenhauer conducts Stewart's Boston "Stadia Suite" complete, as the last half of the program.

IRISH LEAGUERS GIVING FREELY

Already nearly $6,000 of the $10,000 pledged to the United Irish League by the Boston branches at the convention held in this city last month has been contributed. The members of Boston Central Council hope to have the entire amount pledged soon to be forwarded in two or three weeks.

RALLY IN DORCHESTER.

A rally will be held in the Municipal Building, Upham's Corner, Ward 16, to-morrow evening. The speakers are Vahey and Barton, Hon. John H. Casey, Ex-Mayor William R. Hayes of Springfield, Councilor L. F. Burry and Arthur M. Huddell, the labor leader. Representative William H. O'Brien and James H. Kelley, Hon. James E. McConnell will preside.

LEAGUE BELIEVES IN LEGITIMATE CAPITAL

—William N. Osgood

Defining the position of the Independence party on the matter of public ownership of public utilities in a manner unreadily demonstrated the position of the new party is widely distinct from any plank in the Socialist platform, William N. Osgood, Independence League candidate for Governor, successfully answered the interrogatories of Charles Hunt, a Somerville Socialist, last evening at Columbian Hall, Davis square, Somerville. The brief debate was one of the enlivening features of an enthusiastic rally.

The debate came after Mr. Osgood had finished speaking and was entirely free from animosity. Mr. Osgood acquiesced to the appeal of Mr. Hunt that he state his position on the question as to whether or not the Independence party was the only political party that stood for the public ownership of public utilities. Mr. Osgood offered the use of the platform to those who would take issue to any statement he had made.

"The Independence League stands for the public ownership of public utilities. It does not, however, endorse it absolutely the public ownership of private industrial enterprises in which the public is not directly interested," said Mr. Osgood. "Nor does it array capital against labor. It believes in legitimate capital, and it also openly advocates the interests of labor. I explained at length the difference between capital and legitimate capital. That is the distinction which our party makes. That is where we draw the line between legitimate capital and monopoly. We do not advocate or urge class distinction.

Charles B. Butterworth, candidate of the new party for State auditor, presided at the meeting, which was attended by a throng which filled every seat in the hall. The speakers were William N. Osgood, candidate for Governor; Robert J. McCartney, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor; Hon. Roland D. Sawyer, George W. Jennings, candidate for Congress in the Eighth district, and Arthur W. Clark, organizer of the Butchers' Union.

Mr. Osgood said in part:

"From the reports published of the meetings of the Republican and Democratic parties it is apparent that the principal issue of the campaign, as far as they are concerned, is whether Mr. Draper is interested in a Maine corporation and his opponent interested in a Massachusetts corporation.

"Those are insignificant questions to be decided in a campaign for the governorship of the great and historic commonwealth of Massachusetts. Apparently that their meetings are pathetic when compared with the enthusiasm we are developing. The enthusiasm when offered such barren issues. Voters are not to be misled when the sides hooks to feed on.

"Because the Independence party is based upon truth and justice for the common people of the United States, and believes in destroying special privilege, and increasing the opportunities for men in democratic capital and labor, we claim to be the most conservative party and the most scientific one, judged by present economic and social conditions, now seeking the suffrages of the people.

"We do not appeal to any particular class in the community, but to all classes. We are opposed only to those who are exploiting the consumers in every possible way that dishonest ingenuity can devise. We are opposed to trusts and monopolies that are granting favorable terms to large shippers over small shippers. We are opposed to those who have the law on their side, but not on that of the pen to raise the price of necessaries of life to the poor man, woman and child in the land. We are opposed to the use of money power, through special privileges obtained from obsequious and corrupt representatives of the citizens, to crush and destroy the small manufacturer and manufacturer.

Square Deal for All.

"We demand that the small shipper who sends one ton over the railroads shall pay the same rate for the same distances as the large shipper who sends one hundred thousand tons.

"We demand the same treatment in transportation, and in the use of the public light, gas, telephone, telegraph and other public utilities for the small user as for the large.

"We demand the same treatment that is given to our citizens in the use of the postoffice. In that department the poor receive the poor citizen is accorded the same treatment and charged the same rate as the wealthy one. It costs the humblest citizen two cents to send a letter. Rockefeller himself can get no more favorable rate if he sends one hundred thousand letters. That is, there is no favoritism, no special privileges in this government-controlled and government-owned business. So it should be in the case of any and all public business, whether publicly or privately owned. When anything less than this is permitted injustice and unfair advantage is taken of the small consumer or user."

McCartney Scores Draper.

Mr. McCartney said in part: "Let me consider Mr. Draper and what my personal relations as a representative of the Iron Moulders' Union have been with him. The story is three years old, but it demonstrates conclusively that Mr. Draper unquestionably betrayed the confidence that was reposed in him by labor. 'Can he be depended upon not to betray your interests?'

"When I was a member of the committee representing the labor union which took up the charges that the molders in the Hopedale factory were not receiving fair treatment in the matter of hours and wages and that they were being forced to leave all connections with trade union, we met Mr. Draper.

"We assured him that the men had been notified by a peremptory notice that unless they severed their union connections they would cease to be workmen at the Hopedale factory. Many of the men had houses and homes partly paid for. They were getting decently located in Hopedale, and their judicious policy must necessarily be to follow the dictates of the company and retire from active participation in the union.

"Mr. Draper, fearful of the injurious effect that the public prosecution of such a policy would have on his political aspirations, asserted as that there had been a misunderstanding. He hastened to assure us that he would personally escort the committee through the factory as evidence to his employes that he was on good terms with the union officials.

"We assured him that the public prosecution of the plant with the union officials was not necessary, and only fair play for union men was desired. Shortly after the meeting it was expected.

"Nothing was further from the truth, however. The antagonistic policy towards the union was continued."

Luce Too Near People.

Rev. Roland D. Sawyer paid special attention to the result of the lieutenant-governorship contest, and charged that Luce was beaten because he was too near to the people, and he urged that the only remedy for such a vote of the Independence League ticket.

In part Mr. Sawyer said: "People out this way who favored the candidacy of Robert Luce for Lieutenant-Governor may have by this time so far recovered from the blow as to be ready to ask what happened to Luce. Was it because he was too poor to do him reverence who had to hobble himself or

WOMEN IN PANIC IN DORCHESTER CRASH

SCORE SHAKEN UP IN TROLLEY COLLISION NEAR COLUMBIA ROAD.

Women screamed and men shouted and panic reigned for a short time to-day when an in-bound Columbia road electric car struck an in-bound Milton car at the crossing of the tracks at the intersection of Columbia road and Washington street, Dorchester. Fifteen people were shaken up, but no one badly hurt. Lenses on five rails are believed to have caused the accident.

A Columbia road car was swinging around the wide curve and down the steep hill from Franklin park at about 8:30 o'clock this morning as an in-bound Milton car started to cross Columbia road in Washington street. The Milton car, it is said, had the right of way.

The motorman on the Columbia road car tried to stop it, but the car shot ahead and struck the rear vestibule of the Milton car just as it was clearing the track. The crash was heard for blocks. The force of the impact was such that the glass in the front vestibule of the Columbia road car and the rear of the Milton car was shattered.

Panic reigned for a few moments. The women screamed and men shouted and some made a dash for the rear door of the Columbia road car as it plunged into the Milton car. The conductors called out for all passengers to keep their seats, that there would be no danger.

When the crash came ten passengers in the Milton car and five in the Columbia road car were badly shaken up, but none was injured so as to require any medical attention.

The Washington street line from Milton was tied up for an hour as the Columbia road car was so badly damaged that an emergency car from the repair shops had to be sent to drag it away.

Much credit is due to Captain Michael Carroll for the fine showing of the crack Shawmut Furniture Company bowling team, which now leads the Retail Furnishers' League in total pinfall. The team is setting a pace that is hard to follow. Captain Carroll says his team is out to get the Shawmut championship trophy, and nothing but an accident will prevent it. Rather a strong statement, when one considers the splendid records made by other teams in the league the past few seasons. The Shawmut bowlers have long been recognized as an aggressive aggregation, and big scores are looked for under the leadership of Captain Carroll.

ATTRACTIONS AT THEATRES ALL WINNERS

Merry Musical Shows, Thrilling Melodrama and Dainty Comedy Make Up the Bills.

There are four musical shows and six dramas on the Boston stage this week, besides the regular vaudeville and burlesque entertainments, two food fairs, a number of moving picture productions and one exhibition to add to the gayety of the autumn season.

At the Majestic Theatre Lew Fields in displaying in "The Girl Behind the Counter" that he is more than a comedian in dramatic art. He is getting to be a clever actor all the time.

"Hoyland" is as popular as ever in the song line, and there are other musical hits that have lasting merit to be heard by everybody who goes to the Globe Theatre, where "Fifty Miles From Boston" is the bill.

It gives the "tenderfoot" a thrill to see bloodthirsty Apaches riding down the side of a cliff in "The Round-Up" at the Hollis Street Theatre. It is a great bit of stage "realism."

"The Thief" at the Park Theatre has stolen the admiration of all Bostonians who admire fine acting and a really unusual and vivid play. Kyrle Bellew has never done anything better.

Still Holds Favor.

This is the ninth week of the run of "The Merry Widow" at the Tremont Theatre and it is holding public favor much longer than the famous hats which were given its name.

Twentieth century vaudeville, moving pictures and illustrated songs are the offerings at the Hub Theatre, and the bill will be changed to-night for the balance of the week.

Annette Kellermann has caused a sensation at Keith's Theatre by her fascinating exhibition of diving and dancing. There are many other star features in the bill there.

"The poetry of motion" takes on a new meaning after Adeline Genee has been seen. This wonderful dancer is the chief feature of "The Soul Kiss." The fine production at the Colonial Theatre is high class.

Knapp's Millionaire Band gives a concert at the Columbia Theatre on Sunday evening next.

"The Royal Family" at the Boston Theatre is a strong play by Robert Marshall, and the stock company at this house is giving it a most admirable performance.

The cast which is giving "Judah" at the Castle Square Theatre this week, includes John Craig, Mary Young, Edith Hall and other members of the sterling stock company.

Thrilling Melodrama.

At the Grand Opera House, the home of melodrama, "Convict 999" is the current play, and it is a piece which is full of sensational incidents and presented by a very competent company.

"At the World's Mercy" is the Bowdoin Square Theatre play now holding the stage, and it is a play which touches the public heart as few can. The stock favorites are in the cast.

The vaudeville bill at the Orpheum this week is one of the best ever seen in Boston and includes the Four Mortons, Alexander Carr and other headliners, not forgetting the remarkable Canadian Trio Feiers.

The Nelson-fians fight pictures shown at the Howard are as realistic as anything in their line can be. To see them is next to seeing "Bat" beat the Baltimore wonder.

"The Cave Manufacturers" are giving a burlesque show at the Palace Theatre which is hard to beat. The comedians and the rest of the performers are all leaders in their line.

"The Star Show Girls" have drawn the public to the Columbia Theatre this week as if they were human magnets. It's a lump up show. The Amateurs to-morrow night.

Among the world's best things to drink is "Salada" Tea. Its purity, flavor and delicousness stand unrivalled. All grocers sell it. ——ad

COUNSEL HEARD 500 LIVES LOST IN DEFENCE OF SIX SICILIANS

When the eighth day of the trial of the six Sicilians accused of murder in the second degree in causing the death, on the night of August 15, of Peter X. Cardenzani, an employe of the Union Freight Company, opened to-day, Horatio N. Allis, counsel for some of the defendants, concluded his opening for the defence.

He said the defence would show that the police on the night that Needham was killed could have arrested the men that were implicated, but did not do so.

"We will show you also," said Mr. Allis, "that the men who are guilty of this crime smiled for truly a few days later, and that there is no reason for holding any one of the prisoners on this charge."

Attorney Allis, with F. B. Sawin, appears for Guiseppe Cardenelli, Antonio Orlando and Cesare Germasino. Two of the defendants, Pietro Di Pace and Rosario Taormino, are represented by James F. Sweeney, and Guiseppi Zengari is represented by John P. Feeney.

Attorney Feeney, for Zengari, said: "We will show you that Zengari never was a policeman; that it was only in shooting Accer Wilson the cut on Cardenelli's head that Zengari got blood on his shirt and not on his shirt."

Mr. Sweeney, counsel for Di Pace and Taormino, said:

"The government has not produced a witness who saw Peter Needham attacked by any man who had a weapon or knife in his hand."

KEITH'S AUDIENCE JOINS IN "AMERICA"

There were unusual features in Keith's Theatre and the Bijou Dessert yesterday, in honor of the author of "America," Samuel Francis Smith, who was born 100 years ago. At Keith's, after the regular vaudeo badours had finished their act, Edward Waltersteit stepped before the footlights and announced in observance of the day Mr. Keith had requested that the opening sing "America," and that the audience join in the observance. Miss Mabelle Fetters then sang the verse, and as she did so on the immense American flag which literally filled the proscenium, was lowered as a background for the tableaux. The audience rose in a body and joined in the chorus.

MANILA, Oct. 22.—Additional reports of damage wrought in the Cagayan valley by the typhoon indicate that loss of life will reach 500.

The most thrilling rescue is a thrilling rescue of 100 natives was effected through the heroism of Lieutenant Robert Clarke, Lieutenant Tredway and Postmaster Fosse, the survivors say that 300 residents of the submerged Bolog village, which is located some distance below Aparri, were swept away and drowned.

The three Americans, aided by one Filipino volunteer, were informed of the great danger that threatened the village and managed to reach a boat. Approaching the shore in a series of short rushes between breakers, that threatened at any moment to swamp their frail craft, the rescuers found scores of natives clinging to the poles of their wrecked habitations. It is reported that many were drowned at Ilagan and that the town was almost entirely destroyed.

BIG REGISTRATION FRAUD IN ST. LOUIS

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 22.—It is believed that 540 indictments will result from registration frauds, according to Circuit Attorney Sager. He announced yesterday that efforts to verify 1,138 registrations in six ring wards by means of registered letters had resulted in only 142 of the voters being found. The postoffice returned 540 letters and indictments will be asked on these.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The first positive confirmation of the report that the marriage between the Duc D'Abruzzi and Miss Katherine Elkins is to take place without delay was obtained by the AMERICAN to-day. It was learned that a well-known Fifth avenue firm has nearly completed the bride's trousseau. Included in this wonderful collection are a wedding gown of white satin, a court gown studded with pearls, a number of traveling dresses and no fewer than twenty-two boudoir gowns of rare Italian lace.

No little significance is attached to the fact that while the Fifth avenue firm (Louise & Co.) were originally instructed to take their time, orders came recently from the Elkins family to hurry everything along. So the entire trousseau is expected to be ready by the latter part of next week.

Plans for the trousseau to be designed for a suite a la empire were begun more than three months ago. At that time an expert was sent abroad by Louise & Co. under instructions to search Europe for the most beautiful laces, particularly Italian laces.

Mostly Costly Ever Designed.

It is now a month since the expert arrived home in America. From the establishment it is learned that the lace supplied for Miss Elkins were especially matched to suit the periods which her wonderful wardrobe represents.

The result is that Miss Elkins will have the most costly and beautiful trousseau ever designed for a princess of a millionaire's daughter.

The Empire and Directoire styles and a revival of the famous "Eugenie lift" are the distinguishing characteristics of Miss Elkins's trousseau. The extensive preparations of the bridal suite, the fame of which has traveled abroad and is already calculated to arouse the envy of a princess, have been under way for months, even exciting malice and controversies about the betrothal occupied columns in the daily papers.

The purchasing of fabrics and planning of gowns was carried on quietly and secretly.

It will be a feature of the bridal suite that every stitch of the lingerie is trimmed with real lace. The design of every gown is a la Empire, from the ivory satin court gown fashioned after the style made famous by Empress Eugenie, to the twenty-two boudoir gowns not yet completed.

Gown Made of Old Satin.

The Princess Marguerita, who prides herself on her pearls, will marvel at the trimming of priceless seed pearls which, it is rumored, will adorn the court gown.

At Mme. Louise's establishment those who have been assigned to assist in bringing about a hurried completion of the trousseau spoke of its costly fabrics and jeweled trimming with bated breath.

The wedding gown, classic in its simplicity, will be made of old satin. The point lace is of Josephine design, to be in keeping with the period which the costume represents.

The "Eugenie lift" is a fashion which is the result of a caprice of the famous French beauty. Eugenie had every gown designed with a little train in front as well as in back, which occasioned the necessity of lifting the gown that whirled in edging folds of silk about her feet as she walked.

Since the sudden decision to rush the trousseau in order that everything may be ready for the bride-to-be in case the anticipated fitting should be necessary sooner than is expected the services of several other well-known New York establishments have been enlisted, and the thirty-three tailor-made traveling gowns are also well under way.

A Dress for Every Need.

Directoire afternoon toilettes, morning robes, automobile coats and marvelously planned gowns anticipating every possible social event from the presentation at court to the smallest function of the year, are being completed.

These dresses all have been carefully designed by the most noted modistes both here and abroad. No expense has been spared.

As to the title, it is already bestowed upon Miss Elkins by the employes of Louise & Co., who speak of the trousseau as belonging to "Mme. la Princesse." The future bride of the Duc d'Abruzzi, in her pearls and laces, bids fair to outshine the Princess Margherita, who, as the Pearl of the Savoie, has the distinction of owning the rarest collection of laces and pearls in Europe.

WATER DRINKERS SELDOM HAVE RHEUMATISM OR BAD KIDNEYS

"The people here do not drink enough water to keep healthy," explained a well-known authority. "The numerous cases of kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism are mainly due to the fact that the drinking of water, nature's greatest medicine, has been neglected.

Stop loading your system with medicines and curealls, but get on the water wagon. If you are really sick, why, of course, take the proper medicines—plain common vegetable treatment, which will not shatter the nerves or ruin the stomach.

To cure Rheumatism you must make the kidneys do their work; they are the filters of the blood. They must be made to strain out of the blood the waste matter and acids that cause rheumatism; the urine must be neutralized so it will no longer be a source of irritation to the bladder, and, most of all, you must keep these acids from forming in the stomach. This is the cause of stomach trouble and poor digestion. For these conditions you can do no better than take the following prescription: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime, but don't forget the water. Drink plenty and often.

This valuable information and simple prescription should be posted up in each household and used at the first sign of an attack of rheumatism, backache or urinary trouble, no matter how slight.

20 LASTERS IN LYNN STRIKE

An echo of the recent shoe strike in Lynn was heard to-day when twenty lasters in the shoe factory of A. F. Smith & Company on Essex street, Lynn, quit, refusing to work with a non-union laster whom the company had refused to discharge.

A short time ago the union's agent discovered that a non-union laster was employed in the factory. He was approached and given a chance to join the union. He refused and the union next took the matter up with A. F. Smith. Smith refused to discharge the laster so the men walked out to-day.

Immediately after the strike has been declared union agents Charles O. Whidden and Michael Curran, leaders of the recent big strike, went into conference with Mr. Smith. They hope to secure the discharge of the non-union laster.

SMUGGLERS OPERATING IN BOSTON

Customs Officials Hunting Band Working Here and in New York.

GLOVES THEIR SPECIALTY

Boston custom officials are hunting down a band of smugglers who have been engaged in wholesale operations at the port of New York, and who, it is believed, have also brought in goods at this port and evaded the customs duties.

The first knowledge the Boston officials had of the fact that large smuggling operations were being carried on by an organized band in New York, Boston, Albany and elsewhere was last Saturday, when a special treasury agent traced a shipment of gloves that had been smuggled into New York to this city. They were in the possession of Giovani Coressa, a North End Italian, who surrendered them to the authorities when a demand was made upon him for them.

Yesterday New York officials raided the home of Maria DeLuisi, No. 97 Schenck avenue, Brooklyn, and found 5,000 pairs of the same lot of gloves that were seized in Boston on Saturday.

The gloves were brought to New York on the Mediterranean ship Louisiana. The smugglers also operated on the Creole and other ships plying between New York, Boston and Italian ports.

The leader of the band of smugglers, Neapolitti Manali, was arrested a month ago in New York on the charge of smuggling, but he gave bail and escaped across the water. It is believed by the officers that he sailed from Boston on the White Star liner Canopic and is directing the operations of his confederates from headquarters in Naples.

Ships coming to Boston from Mediterranean ports will be subjected to vigilant inspection and watched carefully night and day by the customs inspectors until the smugglers are detected or their game broken up.

Charcoal Purifies Any Breath

And in Its Purest Form Has Long Been Known as the Greatest Gas Absorber.

Pure willow charcoal will oxidize almost any odor and render it sweet and pure. A panful in a foul cellar will absorb deadly fumes, for charcoal absorbs one hundred times its volume in gas.

The ancients knew the value of charcoal and administered it in cases of illness, especially pertaining to the stomach. In England to-day charcoal poultices are used for ulcers, boils, etc., while some physicians in Europe claim to cure many skin diseases by covering the afflicted skin with charcoal powder.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges go into the mouth and transfer foul odors at once into oxygen, destroying poisonous gases and acids and when swallowed mix with the digestive juices and stop gas making, fermentation and decay.

By their gentle qualities they control beneficially bowel action and stop diarrhoea and constipation.

Bad breath simply cannot exist when charcoal is used. There are no ifs or ands about this statement. Don't take our word for it, but look into the matter yourself. Ask your druggist or physician, or better still, look up charcoal in your encyclopedia. The beauty of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges is that the highest pharmaceutical expert knowledge obtainable has been used to prepare a lozenge that will give to man the best form of charcoal for use.

Pure willow and honey is the result. Two or three after meals and at bedtime sweeten the breath, stop decay of teeth, aid the digestive apparatus and promote perfect bowel action. They enrich the supply of oxygen to the system and thereby revivify the blood and nerves.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are sold everywhere in vast quantities, thus they must have merit. Every druggist carries them, price, twenty-five cents per box, or send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

HARVARD LEADER POINTS OUT EVILS OF MEN MARRYING ON LESS THAN $15 A WEEK

Thomas Nixon Carver, professor of economics at Harvard University and one of the most able writers on economic subjects of the day, has prepared for the BOSTON AMERICAN a special article on the general question of how much a man should earn before he marries. Dr. Herbert S. Johnson says a man should earn $15 a week or more. He adds that under ordinary circumstances he would not marry a man unless he earned $15 a week.

Professor Carver discusses the question from the academic standpoint, bringing out many salient ideas. He is a member of the council of the American Economic Association.

Professor Carver observes that it is not in the interest of society or the laboring classes that people who cannot earn $15 a week should try to marry and bring up a family in a place like Boston.

He advocates the adjustment of the labor questiodn and the exclusion of the ever increasing stream of unskilled foreign laborers.

That the standard of living among the less skilled laborers should be raised is the belief of Professor Carver, but he also adds that under existing laws that reform would be almost impossible.

As long as we allow unrestricted immigration to overcrowd the labor market, says Professor Carver, it will be futile to try to alleviate poverty or to improve conditions.

By Prof. Thos. Nixon Carver

If one clergyman were to refuse to perform the marriage ceremony in any case where the man's income was less than $15 a week, it would of course, have absolutely no effect except that it would hurt the clergyman's own conscience. If all clergymen were to refuse under similar circumstances some few couples might be induced to defer marriage, but most of them would be married by civil officers.

If neither clergymen nor civil officials would perform the ceremony a certain larger number would defer marriage, but many couples would form unions without the marriage ceremony. If this could be in some miraculous way prevented, there would be no children born of parents who were unable to earn $15 a week.

This would be a good thing, so far as it goes, because it is not to the interest of society, or of the laboring classes, that people who can not earn $15 a week should beget children and try to bring them up in a place like Boston.

When people who cannot earn $15 a week bring children into the world the chances are that the children will be like them. There will thus be a large supply of unskilled laborers to crowd the market and make conditions worse for the superior laborers.

The Labor Question.

But even if some benign, omniscient power could bring this about in a place like Boston, leaving the rest of the world to go on as it does at the present time, it would not do Boston any good.

The vacuum left in the labor market of Boston through the death of the less skilled laborers so multiply, would be completely filled by the low grade laborers who would come in from the outside. The labor market of Boston would be as badly overcrowded as it is now.

But if the thing could be brought about in the whole world or in the whole United States, or in some considerable portion of the world, like the United States, and if immigration to the United States could then be so restricted as to prevent flooding of the market by surplus labor from the outside, the result would be very much better labor —millions than now prevail.

Of course there is no benign, omniscient power who is going to do anything of the kind for the people of the United States, or any other part of the world. The only thing might be accomplished, however, by the slow but sure standard of living among the less skilled laborers.

If it came to be regarded, among the laboring classes themselves, as an improper thing for any man to marry or beget children, until he was earning $15 a week in a place like Boston, or a proportionately smaller amount in places where the cost of living is lower, very few individuals would care to marry on less than that.

How to Improve Conditions.

The esteem of his fellows and associates is so highly prized by the individual laborer that very few would care to forfeit that esteem by marrying when he was not able to support a family according to the prevailing ideas of decency.

But to raise the standard of living in this country would be futile, under existing laws, because cheap labor comes into the country in unlimited quantities.

The utter futility of trying to do anything materially to improve the condition of the less skilled laborers, or materially to alleviate poverty, so long as we allow the labor market to be over-crowded by unrestricted immigration, is too apparent to need argument.

Some people are foolish enough to imagine that we can keep the conditions of life in this country permanently better than they are in the countries from which the immigrants are allowed to come in unrestricted numbers.

So long as there are no barriers put in the way of immigration, there is no better reason to suppose that labor conditions can be permanently better on one side of the Atlantic than on the other, than there is to suppose that they can be permanently better on one side of the Charles river than on the other.

PROF. CARVER, HARVARD, ON MARRIAGE PROBLEM

It is not in the interest of society or the laboring classes that people who cannot earn $15 a week should try to marry and bring up a family in a place like Boston.

When poorly paid men marry and bring children into the world the chances are that the children will be like them There will thus be a large supply of unskilled laborers to crowd the market and make conditions worse.

If it came to be regarded as an improper thing to marry on less than $15 a week very few individuals would care to marry on less. The esteem of his fellows and associates is so highly prized by the individual laborer that very few would care to forfeit that esteem by marrying when he was not able to support a family according to the prevailing idea of decency.

Movement to better conditions would have to be world wide.

DOG UNEARTHS HUMAN SKULL

NEWFIELDS, N. H., Oct. 22.—The shepherd dog of Albert McBurnie brought a human skull to the McBurnie barn. The dog was playing with its gruesome find on the lawn when members of the family discovered it.

The town authorities have been notified and the woods will be searched for the skeleton in the hope of solving the mystery surrounding the disappearance of John O. Wiggin of Stratham four years ago.

On Thanksgiving Day, 1904, Wiggin started to walk from Manchester to his home in Stratham, and was never afterwards seen.

MURDERED JEWELER TO GET DIAMOND

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 22.—R. T. Butterworth, a jeweler and a brother of William Butterworth of Chicago, is dead as the result of having been shot by a highwayman near his residence. The object of the crime presumably was to get a $350 diamond ring Mr. Butterworth wore, as a gold watch and considerable money he had in his pockets were not touched.

PAY US LIVING WAGE, DEMAND GIRL STRIKERS

Chelsea Shoe Factory Workers Declare They Fight to the Finish.

[illegible] is a joke."

This is the statement of the men and women shoe workers of Chelsea who have gone on strike. They have been employed by the G. A. Walton shoe factory.

The strikers number 200. They have organized the Independent Shoe Workers' Union of Chelsea, and declare they will not go back to work till their demands have been granted.

The factory had been closed down by the owners as a result of the strike. The factory employed 1,800 men and women.

The strikers demand simply this:

Wages equal to the wages paid their trades in Lynn. They claim they have been receiving nearly 20 per cent. lower than the Lynn workers.

500 At Mass Meeting.

A mass meeting of the strikers was held in the hall at No. 220 Broadway, Chelsea, last night, and as a result of the enthusiasm shown at the meeting the strikers are much encouraged.

Over 500 shoe workers attended the meeting. Many names were added to the rolls of the new Chelsea union, and more workers joined the union to-day.

Michael Tracey, business agent of the Lasters' Union of Lynn, one of the leaders in the recent Lynn strike, was one of the speakers at last night's meeting. He told the Chelsea workers that the Lynn workers are with them in their fight for a living wage and better conditions. His speech aroused great enthusiasm.

David Rosen, secretary of the Independent Shoe Workers' Union of Chelsea, which has been organized since the strike, presided. Speeches were also made by James F. Carey of Haverhill, Maurice Stone of the Independent Shoe Workers' Union of Lynn, who spoke in Hebrew; John L. Gallagher of Springfield, H. M. Verjunen of Boston, Elmer Robinson, a Lynn labor leader, and A. S. Zartarian, who spoke in Armenian.

1,800 Now on Strike.

The 200 on strike include lasters, assemblers, pounders, pullers over, sole layers, edgemakers and edge trimmers. Of this number about thirty-five are women.

Up to Tuesday morning the factory continued running, but then it shut down, and at the present time the number out of work because of the strike is said to be between 1,600 and 1,800.

The Independent Shoe Workers' Union has already more than 100 members. It is the intention of the union to attempt to unionize the employes of every shoe factory in the city. The officers are Barney Baker, president, David Rosen, secretary, and Mrs. Aggie Ryan, treasurer.

SETS BOY'S CLOTHES ON FIRE AS JOKE

Morris Farms, aged seven, of No. 67 Henley street, Charlestown, is at the Relief Hospital to-day, seriously burned about the body. His clothes became ignited from a blazing paper which was placed back of him by a boy who stole up behind Farms to play a joke on him. An effort is being made to learn the identity of the boy who set Morris's clothes on fire.

"SILLY ROT," SAYS HEARST

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 22.—William R. Hearst stopped here yesterday on his way to Petersburg, Ind., to speak there at a meeting in honor of Thomas E. Hogan.

"Will you answer an article in Collier's Weekly in which it is charged that you paid two men $12,000 to steal those letters from the office of John D. Archbold?" Hearst was asked.

"Oh, that article is silly rot," he answered. "There is not a word of truth in it. I never saw them. It says something about letters from Senator Aldrich. I have no letters from Senator Aldrich."

POLICE LACKED DISCIPLINE SAYS CHIEF AT HEARING

NORWOOD IN TURMOIL OVER THE CHARGES AGAINST SACKETT; RESERVE DECISION.

NORWOOD, Oct. 22.—This town is in a turmoil over many charges made against Police Chief F. S. Sackett. The hearing given his accusers by the Board of Selectmen in Village Hall yesterday lasted nearly fifteen hours, and until after midnight. The Selectmen have reserved their decision, but there is feverish interest in the result. It is the one engrossing topic of conversation here, and has divided the citizens more than any political contest ever known in this place.

Chief Sackett's foremost accuser is former Policeman William C. Breen. The head of the local law and order department is charged with:

Ordering his officers to shoot or throw clubs at automobilists who did not obey the command to stop.

To shoot boys who were stealing fruit if they could not be caught.

Refusing to prosecute persons guilty of illegally selling liquor.

Of using profane and improper language. Of conduct unbecoming an officer.

Of clubbing a man over the head, and of other things.

Suspended by Chief.

Policeman Breen had been suspended by Chief Sackett and the feeling between the two men became bitter soon after the latter assumed office. Both have many partisans in the town and each has many opponents.

Dr. Francis N. Cragin, a practicing physician in this town for more than thirty years, said that Chief Sackett had given him thirty hours in which to leave town. He said that Chief Sackett had threatened to "make it too hot for him" if he failed to obey the command. Dr. Cragin had been complained of for illegally selling liquor and acknowledged, when arraigned, examined by Attorney O'Connell, that he had agreed to leave town when asked to do so by the police chief.

Mrs. H. E. Nickerson said that Chief Sackett had wrongfully accused her thirteen-year-old son of setting fires and had threatened to lock the boy up in a dark hole. She admitted on cross-examination, however, that the boy is now in the State School in Waverly and had been sent there by court order after an investigation of the fire incidents.

Lack of Discipline.

When he took the stand to testify in his own behalf Chief Sackett said that he had found the Norwood police force very lacking in discipline when he took charge on November 30, 1907, and that there was a well defined system of "graft" by which men drew pay when they had done no work.

He accused Policemen Breen, Holman and other officers, whom he did not name, of conspiring to have him removed from office because he enforced department rules. He said he had suspended Breen and that Holman was to be tried for insubordination and that neither had excused him to the selectmen until he put them both under fire.

Chief Sackett admitted that he had occasionally ordered profanity, but denied that he is habitually profane. He had had 4,000 cases in court and had lost but eleven. He said he had 500 rounds of fire blank cartridges at automobilists, but had never told him to fire bullets.

SHELBURNE IS SAVED FROM FOREST FIRES

SHELBURNE, N. H., Oct. 22.—After twenty-four hours of terror from the relentless sweep of forest fires, this town is to-day resting safe, the battle of the townspeople against the flames having been successful.

About 200 workers struggled against the blaze until late in the afternoon, when they had beaten it to a standstill on its way toward the town, though it is leaping unchecked to the eastward and has swept over acres of timberland in Gilead, just across the border line in Maine.

In that vicinity in a forest area of twenty by thirty square miles, and in the path of fire and serious only a drenching rain can check the progress of the fire.

Huntsmen ranging these regions are leaving for home in disgust, because all the game that has not been burned to death has fled many miles away to distant safety.

Mount Hayes, at the base of which Gorham village stands, is still afame.

SAFE BLOWERS WRECK STORE IN NEWBURY

NEWBURYPORT, Oct. 22.—Oldtown and a large part of Newburyport was panic-stricken early to-day, when three yeggmen used an overcharge of nitroglycerine in blowing the safe in the grocery store of William Dole, on the State road and close to the Newburyport line.

The explosion was tremendous, and men rushed from houses nearby in time to see the outlaws escaping. William Dole, proprietor of the store, revolver in hand, chased one of the yeggs a half mile.

The outlaws failed to secure a cent from the safe, as the overcharge of glycerine alarmed hundreds of people. The safe was literally blown to bits and the interior of the store wrecked by the force of the concussion. The windows in the counting-room were shattered.

When men rushed to the store from every quarter, about 2:15 this morning, wheels were heard in Parker street, just adjoining the store, and a team was heard to start off at full speed.

At the same instant William Dole, who lives nearby, armed with his revolver, saw one man running down the State road toward the heart of Newbury. Dole followed this man and chased him for half a mile until the fugitive disappeared in the darkness.

The Newburyport police were telephoned at once, and a squad of officers was early on the scene and looking for some clue by which the yeggs could be traced and followed.

It was found that all the money they got in the store was what they secured when they smashed the pay telephone booth in the place. How much money the thieves obtained is not known, probably but a few dollars, if that much.

KANGAROO IN BOXING BOUT

The boxing kangaroo is one of the feature animals in the Bostock shows in the New England Food Fair in the Mechanics Building and has aroused considerable interest among boxers because of his peculiar methods of boxing. The animal is handy with his hind feet as with his hands, or front feet, and frequently during the three rounds the kangaroo stands on his tail and strikes with all four pedals together.

Another most interesting and instructive feature of the Bostock shows is the feeding of the animals every morning at 10:30 o'clock.

To-day members of the Massachusetts Retail Grocers and Provision Dealers' Association, under whose direction the exposition is being held, will make a day of it at Mechanics Building with their families. A social and business meeting will be held late in the afternoon when addresses will be made.

The Edna F. Simmons Ladies' Orchestra will play.

The management now makes a generous offer to couples intending getting married within the next few weeks. All expenses of the license and the "tying of the knot" will be paid and in addition many handsome presents will be made to the lucky couple. Applications should be sent to Mr. A. R. Rogers at the Mechanics Building.

WANT TO BAR OLD WAR SONGS

There is a difference of opinion among the citizens who are trying to make arrangements for the proper celebration of Lincoln's birthday as to the propriety of singing the old war songs that were so popular at the time of the Civil War. This difference cropped out at a meeting held in Mayor Hibbard's office to discuss the plans. Colonel A. T. Fayson Bradley, speaking for the G. A. R., favored the elimination of all objectionable war songs, or any songs that might stir up feeling to such a point that was so strong in the days of the strife. Past Department Commander Wolf believed that some of the old songs should be retained and Rabbi Fleischer was of the same opinion.

General William A. Bancroft was chairman of the meeting.

It was voted that a committee of five, to consist of the Mayor and Laurence Minot and three others to be appointed by them, should have the power to appoint a sub-committee of twenty-five, to make preparations for the celebration in this city.

CHEER HISGEN AT HOME OF HIS BOYHOOD

William Randolph Hearst Tells of Candidate's Rugged Honesty,

WARM WELCOME FOR BOTH

PETERSBURG, Ind., Oct. 22.—A great ovation as ever was accorded from his fellow-men was given to Thomas L. Hisgen, candidate for President, here yesterday by his neighbors and friends, the home folks in Petersburg, and by William Randolph Hearst, national chairman of the Independence party.

In the village of his birth, far from the travelled main lines, and where men's hearts still beat true to the instincts of patriotism and neighborly love, the candidate was welcomed by 3,000 of the men and women he had known as a boy—welcomed, cheered, embraced and hurrahed, then sent to finish his great 20,000-mile campaign tour with the felicitations of his best friends following him.

Mr. Hearst's speech was one of earnest praise for Mr. Hisgen as a man and as a candidate.

A Long Trip to Praise Friend.

Mr. Hearst came from New York, arriving with the first rays of morning. He rode five hours on a dusty, smoky, local train over the worst tracks in America, absorbed his luncheon and spoke for thirty minutes. Then he boarded a special that bore him faster than was safe back over the awful roadbed and whizzed him into Indianapolis at 7:10 last night, where the Pennsylvania Railroad officials kindly held their flyer. He stepped aboard, returning to New York, where he must speak to-night the same as this afternoon.

Political history presents, perhaps, no precedent of such a trip for half an hour's eulogy of a friend.

The Same "Tom" to Old Friends.

Mr. Hearst had little time to scourge the other parties and the corruptionists. His heart was too full of praise and his face was beaming. It took almost all his time to tell "Tom" Hisgen's friends what he thought of "Tom" Hisgen.

And he was "Tom" yesterday. Candidate or no, he was "Tom" to these villagers who had played in the old swimming hole with him, who had gone to school with him, who had courted with him and who had bid him good-by and good cheer when he departed with a bundle over his shoulder to seek his fortunes in a great city.

Petersburg never saw such a day in its history. Business was entirely suspended. The town was decked with bunting and pictures of its favorite son from the decrepit depot to the very extremity of winding Main street.

First Greeted by Old Schoolmate.

Mr. Hisgen boarded the train to which Mr. Hearst was going to Petersburg at Washington, some thirty miles north. There was a pleasant reunion, and Mr. Hisgen introduced the committee of twenty which had journeyed to escort him in triumph into his birthplace. When the grimy accommodation pulled in, the brass band struck up "George Cohan's "Welcome Home," and a human wave swept toward the car steps.

The first man to grasp the smiling candidate's hand was George King, an honored citizen of Petersburg, who trudged with him to the village school every day forty years ago, or more. Then came Mark Knight and Matthew Frank and George Frank and Willis Adams and others.

Mr. Hisgen said himself they were members of the "bunch," and from the intimacy that appeared to exist between him and the men whom he had not seen for three decades, his word must be taken as unfortunate on that point.

Then some women folks burst through the lightly packed throng and there was much kissing and embracing. They were Mr. Hisgen's relatives, one of them his sisters, Mrs. Jared R. Ashby, whom he called Sister Mena, and Mrs. John Batson, who is Sister Carrie.

In the meantime Mr. Hearst was being hailed by the cheering townsfolk, and his right hand was being taxed to its endurance limits. The band struck up "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," and the crowd formed into a triumphal procession, and the guests of honor were swung in an irresistible current of friends up the wide roadway toward the principal street.

On the main corner, directly opposite the house where fifty years ago Mr. Hisgen was born, and facing it, as it happened, a holder of his party. He is the assistant prosecuting attorney of that Federal district. His enthusiasm was as great as anybody's and reflected how truly the gathering was non-partisan.

Thomas L. Hisgen was a boy. He introduced the man who needed no introduction, and said that the sound principles of morality, the simple honesty and the individual steadfastness of the "fine little community where this distinguished man had his birth, his first strength, had done also what he is, the type of American honesty, decency and public worth.

Then arose a great roar, hats went into the air, banners and flags waved and the band played Sousa's "Stars and Stripes," and Mr. Hearst, lifted above the throng on the platform and Mr. Hisgen began to talk.

He told them how glad he was to be there and what it all meant to him even after the triumphs of great cities and throngs that had come to scoff and remained to cheer.

And his neighbors answered back that they were glad, too. They had waited long for this, and the people of Petersburg are not the kind of people that speaks their enthusiasm and their joy if they are enthusiastic and joyful.

Gathering Was Non-Partisan.

At the conclusion of Hisgen's speech, in which he confided to them the story of his fight against the Standard Oil Trust and the battles which he has waged for pure government, a bull terrier with a black blanket, upon which was printed the words "Independence Party," was led across the stage, and there were cheers for the party and the little mascot, and then cheers for "Tom" Hisgen, and he retired to the back of the platform, where he listened to of handshaking and recalling of old days over the rallying.

Mr. Hearst was then introduced by John H. Changelle, a Republican and an old-time

W. R. Hearst's Speech to the Boyhood Friends of Candidate Thomas L. Hisgen

Petersburg, Ind., Oct. 22.—William Randolph Hearst's speech here yesterday was as follows:

MY FRIENDS—This assembly is a personal tribute to Mr. Hisgen in the land of his birth. I take the greatest possible pleasure in attending it and in adding my voice to yours in praise of this patriotic citizen, this able man and loyal friend.

I knew Mr. Hisgen and admired his courage and character before his candidacy for Governor of Massachusetts. I came to know him better and admire him more in that heroic battle. But since his nomination for the Presidency and since our tour together throughout this country in this campaign I have come to know him well.

I know no stronger, abler, kinder or truer man. Mr. Hisgen, the able business man, has accumulated his competency not by harsh and unfair methods toward his competitors, not by greedy and grasping methods toward the consuming public, not by narrow and grinding methods toward his employes, but by clean, personal good judgment, executive ability and hard work.

Mr. Hisgen, though famous as a fighter, is as kind and courteous and considerate a gentleman as I have ever met. I have found on our travels and experiences that he will submit patiently to any amount of discomfort and inconvenience, but that he will not for one moment tolerate the slightest injustice. I do not believe that anyone can persuade Mr. Hisgen to fight anything except what is wrong, and then I do not believe that anyone can persuade him to stop fighting until that wrong is righted.

Mr. Hisgen is as determined to secure right and justice for his fellow-men as he is to secure it for himself.

His courage is the high courage of character and conviction—the courage not of the fighting animal, but of the Christian soldier. Mr. Hisgen's honesty is proverbial, and it is not merely the common honesty of dollars and cents, although that is uncommon enough nowadays.

Mr. Hisgen is honesty in every action, honesty and sincerity in every thought and word.

Mr. Hisgen says he is not a public speaker, but I think he is one of the best I ever heard. He uses simple and direct language and convinces his audience.

I have known men, the tops of whose heads were mere sounding boards, who opened wide mouths and gave utterance to sonorous sentences, who would talk on any subject for any length of time and yet have never made a convert.

They were utterly insincere themselves and their auditors realized it in this country, where the citizens are not hysterical nor emotional, but where they are interested, intelligent and educated, the best public speaking is a sincere statement of exact facts and an earnest appeal to the conscience and the common sense of the American voter.

Mr. Hisgen, I say, is strong and able and kind and true, and such a man is worthy to win any confidence.

I thought one day, as I was travelling with Mr. Hisgen and my family, that if I had a trust fund to leave for my children I would like to leave it with such a man as he. Would not every one of you be glad to have such an administrator?

You would then know that the fund would be carefully invested and ably managed. You would know that it would be so honestly conducted that your children would receive every dollar that was theirs, and perhaps even a little bit more just for good measure.

You would know that the funds were in the hands of a liberal and judicious man, who would allow your children every enjoyment compatible with their mental and moral development.

My friends, a public office is a public trust. The standard you apply in estimating a man's fitness to conduct a private trust for you and your children you should apply when considering his fitness to conduct a public trust for all your fellows and all their children.

I hope I will not offend anyone in this audience when I say frankly that I would not like to leave any trust for my children in the hands of either Mr. Taft or Mr. Bryan.

In the first place, I would doubt Mr. Bryan's business ability. He does not seem to be able to do anything but talk, and I would not like to have any trust fund invested in a talking machine. In the second place, I would be afraid that the same thing might happen to my trust fund that happened to the inheritance of the widow of Mr. Bryan's dead friend. A secret will might suddenly be discovered which would leave Mr. Bryan proprietor of my trust fund and leave my children out in the cold.

Then I would not like to leave my trust fund to Mr. Taft for fear that he might invest it in the inflated securities of some of his corporation associates. I think Mr. Taft himself is honest enough, but if ever the trust fund got into the hands of some of those Captain Kidds of industry my children would have to walk the plank.

My children are exceedingly dear to me, and so are other people's children to them. And there are a great many families in distress in these days who might have been prosperous and happy if we had better business men in charge of public affairs.

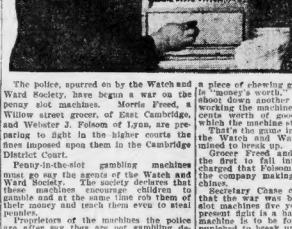
It is our duty in this campaign not to select the largest and most amiable gentleman, nor the loudest and most reckless talker, but the ablest and most honest executive that we can.

I do not think there is any doubt that Mr. Hisgen is that man. If everyone who realizes perfectly well that Mr. Hisgen is the most capable business man and the best executive offered the electorate will vote for him, he will be triumphantly elected.

If he is not elected this time. I for one want to see him renominated and elected next time.

I am not a candidate for any public office. I have done my full duty in that line, and, furthermore, I feel that I can do more effective work in support of other men.

Mr. Hisgen is splendidly effective as a candidate. He has made his initial campaign. He has done hard work. He will get an immense vote, and either in 1908 or 1912 he should be elected President of the United States.



The police, spurred on by the Watch and Ward Society, have begun a war on the penny slot machines. Morris Freed, a Willow street grocer, of East Cambridge, and Webster J. Folsom of Lynn, are prepacing to fight in the higher courts the fines imposed upon them in the Cambridge District Court.

Penny-in-the-slot gambling machines must pay the agents of the Watch and Ward Society. The society declares that these machines encourage children to gamble and at the same time rob them of their money and teach them even to steal money.

Proprietors of the machines the police are after say they are not gambling devices; that 'you always get your money's worth."

The child puts a penny in the slot, and a piece of chewing gum may fall out. This is "money's worth." Again the penny may shoot down another slide, and the machine working the machine may get 10, 15 or 25 cents worth of goods from the store in which the machine stands.

That's the game in general, and it is one the Watch and Ward Society has determined to break up.

Grocer Freed and Webster Folsom are the first to fall into the toils. It is charged that Folsom is a representative of the company making and owning the machines.

Secretary Chase of the society declared that the war was begun against gambling slot machines five years ago, and that the present fight is a hard one, says every machine is to be found and the operators punished to break up the practice.

"A penny gambler in childhood becomes a dollar gambler when grown up," is the way the society's annual report put it.

PRIZE GARDEN AWARDS GIVEN OUT TOMORROW

Hundreds of Residents in South End Wait Decision of the Social Union.

Awarding of prizes for the best kept gardens of all kinds during the Summer months by hundreds of residents of the South End, by the Garden Committee of the South End Social Union, will take place to-morrow at the Parker Memorial, corner of Berkeley and Appleton streets. Mayor Hibbard will present the prizes. An orchestra from the South End Industrial School will furnish music.

The value of the prizes will be kept as a surprise to the recipients, and will be revealed at the meeting. In addition to the regular prizes badges are to be given for honorable mention.

This is the first year that the committee has worked on such a large scale in the South End. They were formerly allied with Mrs. Jack Gardner's interest in gardens of the North End, but as the South End covered a larger territory, workers were organized as committees from the settlement and neighborhood houses from Boylston street to Roxbury Crossing.

Among the houses furnishing overseers of the gardens were the Memorial Club of Carver street; Denison House, Tyler street; Lincoln House, Emerson street; Dale House, Garland street; South Bay Union, Harrison avenue; Emmanuel Methodist Episcomb street; South End Industrial School, Bartlett street; Ruggles street Neighborhood House Ruggles street, and the Roxbury Neighborhood House, Albany street.

As a result of the interest shown hundreds of gardens sprang up and were cared for all last Summer in public playgrounds, school yards, roofs and back yards.

The committee furnished more than 5,000 packages of seed and more than 800 Winter boxes. Interest was stimulated by the committee in personally visiting during the Summer months all the gardens in the contest, where advice and assistance were given.

In judging of the prizes consideration is given first to the opportunity afforded, then beauty and general excellence. Those in charge of the awarding will be Harry B. Taplin, chairman, and Miss Ellen Mudge, secretary. Miss Julia Bradley was engaged as supervisor and overseer of the gardens.

28 CHURCHES PROTEST IN JAN POUREN CASE

CROVELAND, Mass., Oct. 22.—Rev. Roland D. Sawyer of Haverhill introduced a resolution here at the yesterday afternoon session of the Essex County Conference of Congregational Churches protesting the extradition of Jan Pouren, the Russian refugee. After an earnest plea by Mr. Sawyer the resolution was unanimously passed. The resolution declares it would be an everlasting disgrace to deliver up Jan Pouren, and contrary to all our traditions of liberty. Twenty-eight churches are represented in the conference which made this protest.

SHUMAN AIDS IRISH CAUSE

More than half of the $10,000 to aid the Irish parliamentary party pledged on Monday night at the banquet held in connection with the national convention of the United Irish League in Faneuil Hall, has already been contributed. Dr. A. Shuman, in a letter to Treasurer Thomas B. Fitzpatrick, says: "I see you have made great strides in the collection of funds to aid in the good work the United Irish League is doing. As their cause appeals to our deepest sympathy, I take pleasure in handing you herewith a check for $250 on behalf of our firm."

AUERBACH IN 9TH BEGINS WAR ON KELIHER

Campaign, Though but Twenty-four Hours Old, Already Stirs District.

OLD FACTIONS ROUSED

The campaign for Congress from the Ninth District being made by Junius T. Auerbach as an Independence candidate has aroused the whole district, although but twenty-four hours old. The first Auerbach rally will be held in the Blossom Street ward rooms, Ward 8, to-night and will be worth attending.

The candidate is an eloquent speaker and will tell West End voters why three terms are enough for Congressman John A. Keliher who is seeking one of the Ninth District chairs. Patrick A. Collins, Joseph H. O'Neil or former Mayor Fitzgerald were ever elected.

The feeling throughout the district is strong that the Donovan faction in Ward 9 has had enough. Donovan had four years in the fire department. It is urged, and Mr. Keliher has been the Congressman for six years. The strength of the Auerbach sentiment is astounding the Keliher men, and their ruffle around that they have a hard fight ahead of them and that the Independence candidate stands an excellent chance of winding at the polls.

Assure Him of Support.

Mr. Auerbach has received many letters assuring him of support. One prominent Republican in the Ward writes that he has a score of active work in his behalf. He says: "I will be with you, and so will all my Republican friends."

Another letter is from a large contractor who has been closely allied with Congressman Donovan, and who promises Mr. Auerbach to use all his influence in his behalf. These are straws showing the drift of sentiment in the district.

Auerbach headquarters have been opened in Room 240, Quincy House, and a most aggressive fight is planned for every part of the district.

Many Rallies Planned.

The rallies already planned for by the Auerbach campaigners are to be held as follows:

To-night, Oct. 22—Wardroom, Ward 8, Blossom street.

Friday, Oct. 23—Wardroom, Ward 9, Washington street, near Dover.

Saturday, Oct. 24—Wardroom, Ward 7, Dyer street, near Tremont.

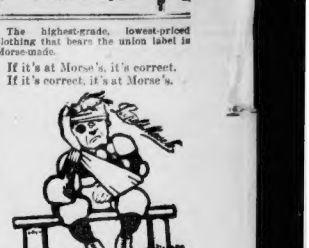
Monday, October 26—Faneuil Hall.

Wednesday, October 28—Wardroom, Ward 3, Bunker Hill and Lexington streets.

Thursday, October 29—Roughan Hall, Charlestown.

Friday, October 30—Ward room, Ward 2, Maverick street, East Boston.

Auerbach headquarters have been opened in Room 240, Quincy House, and a most aggressive fight is planned for every part of the district.



One result of the prevailing popularity of all forms of athletic exercise is the change that has taken place in men's physical proportions.

It has been a subject of deep study with us, for we recognized that no existing styles in ready-made clothing would fit the average athlete.

During our 56 years at clothes-making we have seen many new conditions arise and we have met them all with the complete success that has justified our leadership among New England's clothiers.

And now we've solved this new problem by creating a new Morse-Made model which we have named

The Athletic Built Suit

The name suggests predominant features. The broad shoulders, deep, full chest and tapering waist are typical of the athlete's figure. There are clever novelties in the treatment of cuffs, lapels and button-spacing that are full of character. The chest sizes are limited to 32 to 38 inches. The trousers sizes vary from 29 to 34 inches and are cut on a full peg top pattern.

We have made up a limited number of these suits from specially selected fabrics and we show them in two grades, at $20 and $25.

For the class of men for whom they are intended they are exceptionally good. In fact, you can't find them anywhere else. For the other men we have plenty of other styles at $10 to $40.

Seen our Button-Through Topcoats at $15 and $20? Very classy.

THE MELANCHOLY CORRESPONDENT

"Would to Heaven that the one who takes pen in hand, to pour over us an indigo flood of lamentations and bad news, might be stricken with writer's paralysis"

By DOROTHY DIX

EVERY now and then somebody emits a wail to the effect that letter writing is becoming a lost art.

Would Heaven that it were so! Or, at least, would Heaven that the melancholy correspondents, who takes pen in hand pour over us an indigo flood of lamentations and bad news, might be stricken with writer's paralysis, or remorse of conscience, or any other old thing that would keep him at it—and it is generally "him"—from committing such an unprovoked crime against our peace and happiness.

There is some slight excuse for folks, our troubles to our friends, but there is none at all for writing them. One must talk; and we generally confide our sorrows anyway on the spur of the moment and without malice aforethought.

Moreover, those to whom we tell our tales of woe can see that we are not half as much afflicted as we represent ourselves to be; in fact, that we are really enjoying having a genuine live grievance; and so they can sympathize with us without making any undue call upon their own emotions.

"Blasted Hopes," a Fine Phrase

Not so our hapless correspondent. Things in a letter look serious. The written word takes on the aspect of unrelenting tragedy.

When Edwin writes us that his heart has been broken by Angelina's faithlessness, and that he will never trust woman more, we see our eyes red at the thought of the poor fellow's blighted life. We can not know a thousand miles off that Edwin secretly fancies himself a Byronic hero, and that the dark phrase about blasted hopes sounded good to him, and he was aware that that very night he took pretty Kitty Simkins to the end and got every evidence of having a pleasant time.

So, when some poor soul pours his woes to us, cries crossed and written in a way to take a Sherlock Holmes to discover the proper sequence of the pages, about her husband being a brute and marriage a failure, we mingle our tears and prayers with hers.

Poor girl! What a calamity! And she so young! And divorce such a terrible thing! And those poor, dear, little babies of theirs! And who could have thought such a thing possible, for Tom seemed just everything that was fine in a man!

We go about all day in a perfect mush of pity. The sky is darkened by the cloud that is hanging over that dear girl. Our food has lost its savor, and it seems a mockery to even try to enjoy anything—just because we could know that Sadie had a spat with her husband at breakfast over a new hat, and evened up things by having a perfectly beautiful time writing that self-pitying letter to us, not one word of which she really meant.

Long before we have gotten it she and Tom have kissed and made up, and she has got the hat and is wearing she had got another instead.

The truth is that people who write mournful letters are selfish egotists, who consider others but themselves. They are like bad little boys who hide behind a wall and amuse themselves by firing rocks at the innocent passers-by, relishing the commotion.

Then begin a list of family ills—to some one they love. If they sent about it, there would be an excellent reason for writing her early and often about these heartrending affairs.

But she can do nothing. She is impotent to help and all the good of telling her about them is just to make her unhappy.

Yet nothing stays the hand of the melancholy letter writer. She pours forth her vials of gloom and does the very least one knows to harrow up the feelings and arouse the anxiety of those to whom she indicates these few lines of wails. She wouldn't feel that she had done her duty if she hadn't.

I have in mind at this moment a little bride who has recently been transported home to live, could cure Uncle Josiah's knee by kneeling about it, or quench Willie's thirst by being made miserable. She gets along famously until she gets her family letters, and then she dissolves into tears and melancholy.

Anybody would, for if there is a single unhappy thing that has happened to any of her sisters, or the cousins or the aunts or the neighbors, it is chronicled with the minutest detail.

If anybody has a sore throat it is enlarged upon until it sounds like malignant diphtheria in a letter, and when the writer can think of nothing more unpleasant and appalling to tell, she tells how they miss the little bride, and pities the poor, dear, little thing for having to live so far away among strangers.

Love to Pose as Martyrs

The result of such a batch of letters is that the young woman is a tearful wreck for a day or two, and she has gotten so that she almost dreads to see the dear, familiar handwriting on an envelope.

"Why don't they write me something cheerful," she asks. "Why don't they tell me some good news, instead of all this bad news? Why do they burden me with this anxiety about things that never happen, and that I can't help anyway? Why don't they write me how lucky I am to be married to such a splendid fellow as Jack, instead of telling me how hard it is to be separated from my own family? What I need isn't pity. It's a boxer."

So say we all. Every mother's son and daughter of us has just as many troubles of our own as we can bear conveniently, and the letter full of gloom and doom is just that much more than we can stand. Especially at the times out of ten it is nothing but romantic vaporings of people who think it is noble and interesting to meander along in a pessimistic strain.

They like, too, the attitude of posing as martyrs that they can do for those they love at long distance from close range, where the object of their affections can't get at them.

There is no use in telling this kind of rosy-cheeked correspondent to cheer up in letters. They have got to blow off steam and they will do it anyway. The best we can do is send such missives out to destroy the happiness of as few as possible, and to hurt as little as we can.

If you haven't something cheerful to write, don't write at all. Some message of hope and courage to give you—don't write at all. Better the letter that never came than one that comes only to needlessly sadden.

DOROTHY DIX.

AS A FAMOUS AMERICAN POET ONCE WROTE: "WE SHOULD BE THANKFUL TO WRITERS FOR WHAT THERE IS LEFT IN THEIR INKSTANDS"

Family the Worst Offenders

The mournful letter is an affliction that we are not exempt from, even from a casual acquaintance; but it is our family that is the greatest offender in this respect. Somehow, just because they love us, our poor relatives seem to feel that it gives them the privilege to bring us down with all the unpleasant details they can, and to average letter from home makes the Lamentations of the Prophets sound like a vaudeville farce.

The writer invariably picks out a day when she is feeling a bit rheumatic and has billions, and gives you about four pages of pay two cents for the privilege of send-

Four Forth Vials of Gloom

To what end do the folks at home seek to burden the ones who are away with all the misfortunes and troubles and forlorn ones that have been left behind, whom, God knows, we are anxious enough about anyway?

If Maud, who has married and gone half across the continent from her old home to live, could cure Uncle Josiah's knee by kneeling about it, or quench Willie's thirst by being made miserable

Calamity May Be a Blessing in Disguise

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

ABOUT a year ago some very rich friends of mine lost their money. The family consisted of a husband, wife and a six-year-old boy. The husband was a man about town, who spent most of his time in the numerous clubs he belonged to.

The wife considered herself a semi-invalid. She had never done a thing for herself; knew little or nothing about the household, and though at heart she loved her husband and child, she took absolutely no pleasure in their society because she could think of nothing but her ailments.

The boy was a pathetic little example of over-pampered, half-neglected childhood. He could not stir a step without a nurse-maid at his heels, and yet no one really took the trouble to develop either his head or heart.

Well, as I said before, these three spoiled children of fortune were suddenly left with almost nothing, in the place of millions.

The man woke up first. He had to, for the helpless wife and child looked to him for a roof to cover them.

The wife moaned and cried and said she would die without her lady's maid and other luxuries.

Time Brings Marvelous Change

While things were in that state I went away for a time, and when I came back the husband had found a position and they had moved to one of the suburbs.

A week or so ago I received a note from the wife, asking me to go out and have dinner with them. I went, though I very much dreaded the evening, for I could imagine the string of complaints and miseries I would have to listen to.

My hostess had said that she would meet me at the station, which was rather surprising, for in the old days Eleanor would not have thought of taking that trouble.

When I stepped out of the train I could hardly believe my senses, for instead of a pale, bored woman I had known, there stood a smiling, rosy-cheeked girl.

"Will we walk?" she said, after our greeting. "It is such a glorious day it seems a shame to drive." And that was a surprise number two.

Surprise number three came in the form of the son. As we neared the house, a whooping, red-headed dirty boy, dirty—small person flung himself upon my companion.

Son Becomes a Real Boy

She put a loving hand on his head, "gently, son, gently!" Then turning to me with obvious pride, "He has grown to be such a strong, lively little chap; he plays from morning until night. I simply can't keep him clean, so I let him go until just before dinner, and then we have a grand scrubbing before his daddy gets home."

I went into the house almost dazed. Everything was so changed. I said so. There was one maid, who did most of the work, and the cook, who had been with them she would die without a lady's maid, did the rest.

I suppose I must have showed my bewilderment, for presently my hostess threw out laughing and said: "My dear, you look as utterly amazed that I must explain matters, if you care to listen."

I did care very much, and said so, and while we had a cup of tea she told me the story of the past year.

Whole Family Regenerated

"When we lost our money," she said, "I considered myself an invalid. For the first few weeks I acted like a spoiled child.

"Hubert found work, and began to live a man. He had been used to luxury all his life, you know; had always had a valet, and never had to think of money; but his real man in him came out, and he was so splendid that finally I stopped crying and braced up.

"We found this house, dismissed all the servants but Sarah, who had been Alice's maid, and moved out here. It was awfully hard at first, as I knew nothing about housekeeping, but Sarah helped, and as you see we are perfectly comfortable."

"And happy," I suggested.

"Yes, absolutely happy. For the first time I know my husband and child. The boy, as you see, has developed wonderfully. He has learned how to play and take care of himself. He goes to the public school and for the first time in his life is a healthy, normal child."

"And your husband?"

"Wait until you see him. He has lost his dazed look, and is intensely interested in his business, and I am sure he will be successful.

"He loves this little place, and goes for walks with the boy.

"Oh, I tell you, my dear, losing a fortune was a blessing in disguise to this family. We are real people now."

HOODS THE LATEST FASHIONABLE HEAD COVERING

For evening wear, an Egyptian scarf, such as the one here shown, spangled and embroidered with beads and gold and silver figures, is best suited to a classic face.

Large, round hoods are becoming to the majority of faces, and best fit over delicately plied coiffures. Many like this one are mounted on frames, like Shaker bonnets.

By MARIE MONTAIGNE

PERHAPS there is no head-covering quite so bewitching as a hood. In the depths of one a woman may make herself piquant, demure, coquettish or alluringly fascinating, just as she pleases to plan the color and material of her hood and the manner in which she draws it about her head.

Women are not wearing hoods because they are becoming, but because they are fashionable, and because nothing else quite accommodates itself to the sort of hair-dressing now in vogue. Only the soft and light folds of hood or scarf may safely be draped over the curled and fluffed coiffures of the day—or evening.

Hoods, however, are by no means confined to evening wear. The fashion, really started with automobile hoods, which grew in prettiness as their general becomingness to the feminine face became recognized, and their possibilities as a decorative article of dress became apparent.

For Winter use, for motoring, a hood of fur, velvet, dust cloth, silk, or of such material as will harmonize or form part of the motor-coat, is far more comfortable, warm and secure than the heavy hat tied on with swathing veil.

Indeed, the new hats are mostly heavy, and motor headgear requires to be light and easily fastened to the head. Then, too, what could be lovelier than a hood—a beauty glowing from the snowy frame of white fur hood, or a pair of dark eyes shining from the depths of one of warm brown seal or sable, or mottled silk, just discussing a stray curl or two from the new-old coiffure of side curls?

Motor Hoods Easily Made at Home

Women can make their own motor hoods when the material is not of fur, and, to be really pretty, these should always be fitted in under the front brim with pleatings and ruchings of silk or satin or even crepe lisse.

They may be round and loose and gathered to the cloak or head piece, or an infinite variety of flimsy materials mounted upon soft, light foundations of crenone or lesa will prove most becoming to the face.

Upon the outside of the evening hood may be expended all one's ingenuity. The ruches for face and neck may be of lace over so many soft, flimsy quillings, puffings, ruches and folds as possible, and all these modes are combined with the knife-pleated flouncing over light, soft, fluffy ruchings and quillings of satin or chiffon arranged upon the hood.

Bewitching with a Pretty Face

Between the rows of inner quillings are frequently tacked coquettish little bows, small garlands of flowers, large satin roses or rows of tiny blossoms of a deeper color than the hood, and generally of a contrasting tint, such as pink in a light blue or mauve hood. Anything more bewitching than a pretty face glancing out from such a hood it would be difficult to imagine.

Often loops of black velvet ribbon in the ruffles of a hood are effective, and gold and silver lace and decorations are rich and attractive upon hoods for women not in their first youth.

Large, round hoods are becoming to the majority of faces, and best fit over delicately plied coiffures, where it becomes necessary not to make a change in the set of a rosebud or ribbon, or loosen a curl or two from its correct angle.

There is something at once demure and alluring about the Charlotte Corday hood much affected this season.

Even wedding veils are draped in Charlotte Corday hood fashion. With its elegance of orange blossoms peeping from between drooping edges of lace about the face, and with the side decorative peculiar to this variety of hood, this veil arrangement is far more becoming to a bride than the old bunched head arrangement, which seldom looked well on any girl.

Stylish to Look Like Grandma

Still other hood arrangements for evening wear are built of snowy and scarfs. The Egyptian scarf of net, spangled and embroidered with beads and gold and silver figures, is best suited to a classic face. It is not so new as the crepe scarf or shawl of silk, fringed in various ways and richly embroidered with gilded and silvered lace, often with gold and silver threads.

These scarfs combine lightness with a blending of colors such as will soften and beautify any face. They are easily draped in hood fashion and never disarrange the most lightly built coiffure. They serve the double purpose of hood and scarf for the theater and opera, and may be pressed into service in any size suitable.

Old-fashioned scarfs and shawls of Chantilly and other filmy laces are not only fashionable, but are now thrown over the head and tucked in the form of a hood and wrapped covering at once an air of great elegance and picturesqueness and a quaint reminder of old pictures of grande dames of the long ago.

It is all the vogue to dress like one's ancestors, and if these should turn and dress like us, as in the present case attributed to them, at least nobody hears the protest and everybody seems to make out the ancestress to have been a creature of great loveliness, with a discriminating taste in colors and materials.

To Make a Pretty Evening Hood

The safest way for a woman of small means and little time to require a beautiful evening hood would be to make it of materials already partly made up. The hood may be worn separate from the cloak, or as part of it.

Suppose the evening cloak to be of light pink cloth, suitably braided or embroidered. A cloth hood would be rather heavy for an evening coiffure, so the woman would get a piece of wadded satin large enough to gather into a round hood and would fit loosely over her head. This she would line with gathered or shirred chiffon, net, gauze or plain lustsine, facing a frill inside the edge. The bottom should be gathered to the kind of neck ruching she means to wear. Over the top of the head she should sew a piece of shirred chiffon, gathered to the bottom and edges of the hood. Over this she could lay down a side band of the multifold chiffon quillings, made up in strips to be used for neck ruches and other evening purposes. These quillings come with long shirred, puffed and plaited edges.

It is only work of a few moments to tack the covering of chiffon or net over the hood shape, and baste the broad ruching in the top edges and around the neck. Either net or chiffon will serve the purpose, and ruchings of both may be had ready made.

A few roses may be tucked in the ruching, or a few bows of velvet or satin. The neck should be finished with loops and ends of satin, finished with tassels of silk, gilt or silver, according to the nature of the wrap.

Puzzle Solvers Put Katie in the Ananias Club

SOME of the puzzle class, who are wrestling with the question of Katie's age, go as far as to call her chiffon statement evasive, equivocal, misleading etc.

Katie insists that she told the truth and nothing but the truth when in reply to the Inquisitive Old Party's query she made a clean breast of her age, as follows:

"Tommy is now twice as old as I was when Tommy was six years older than I am now, and when I am six years older than Tommy is now our combined ages will equal mother's age at that time, although she is now but forty-two."

HOW OLD IS KATIE?

Here is an opinion just received from a suffragette:

"The Puzzle Editor—It is just like a man to humiliate a young woman, and then try to square himself with some cheap offering like a sewing machine. Katie will be of age in seven years, and by that time, let us hope, her sex will not bar her from casting a vote. FRANCES MORGAN.

After you have figured out Katie's age, see if you can locate her birthplace, contained in the conversation that took place when the Inquisitive Old Party accosted her, which was as follows:

"Are you the bright little girl from Maine?"

"No; I am her stupid sister."

One hundred puzzle books will be distributed among those sending best answers to "Puzzle Editor," in care of this paper.

"You are looking younger, Miss Fanny, every day."

"I am feeling that way, too."

"What is the secret?"

"Just in training for the census taker."

The Manicure Lady Has Ideas on Politics

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"AS long as we got to talk about politics," said the Manicure Lady, "I want to ask you what you think about the statement which I seen in this morning's paper.

"A gent named Charlemagne Tower says that Mister Roosevelt and Mister Kaiser of Germany is a good deal the same kind of folks. The only great difference, according to this Mister Tower, is that Mister Kaiser is German and Mister Roosevelt has a German name. The more I think of it, George, the more I think Mister Tower is right."

"They are both good fellows," said the Head Barber. "Both of them has nice tarches, too. The rest of their maps is clean shaved, and a man with a mustache pays as close attention to it as a man with a whole mush of face. The mustache is the barber's percentage.

"There is other things to be considered besides hair on the face," said the Manicure Lady. "This Mister Tower, who used to be a Ambassador to Germany, knows a good deal about the Kaiser, and his friends in Washington has told him a good deal about Mister Roosevelt. He knows that both of them is great writers, for one thing."

The Play the Kaiser Wrote

"Then he knows more than I do," said the Head Barber. "What did they ever write that can be found in the circulating libraries?"

"They wrote lots of things," said the Manicure Lady. "The Kaiser wrote a play called Nathan the Lithin Boneria's Attack play, only it was in German.

"It was called 'Two Friends' or something like that, and told how a German jockey who had a overcoat and two much lumber and a swell-and-saucy-looking mustache won the race."

"He wrote a poetical play, too, but the stage manager cut out most of the rhymes and made it look like blank verse.

"Say, George, do you know that Mister Roosevelt has wrote some great books? Didn't you never catch his hunting stories?"

"I never tried to read them," said the Head Barber.

"You ought to have," said the Manicure Lady. "I know most of them by heart. Why, I could tell you the whole story of the good ax Mister De Quincey used in his hunting trip to Africa."

The Tragedy of a Bluejay

"Here is one of the passages, just to show you that I remember it and to show you that Mister Roosevelt is a great writer:

"'I arose with the break of dawn, ate my frugal meal of hard tack and constitution, drank a silk punch and hit the trail. It was a lovely morning. Beyond the Rockies the sun was rising rosily. In the pine trees on both banks of the stream I eyes some like arrows from a band of bedeging Sioux.

"'The little birds began their mating, the little squirrels began their play, and no other sound was heard save the splash of a brook trout as he made for the mouth of a mosquito or the distant peal of a grizzly bear as he came to bear more and had fallen back in despair to a watery grave.'

"Say, George, you ought to see the monkeyshines country farther North, the scenery becomes beautiful. Mountains into the sky, trees bowed their bodily heads in honor of my coming, and in the dell of Running Moose Gulch peaks looked like the teeth of a saw that had been rubbed with toothpowder and then set on fire.

"'It was a thing that we saw, worth shooting, was a bluejay. It sat on the summit of a scrub oak at the extreme feet high. Carefully shoving two pea-bore shells into the chamber of my double-barrel gun, I crept cautiously to the base of the oak and then quickly leaped into my country.

"'The savage and morally wounded bird gave me a long look, and then, with my presence of mind, and as it was within fifteen feet of me, I let him have it. It dropped like a log and gave up the ghost.'

Yes; Even Greater Than Teddy

"That reads pretty good," said the Head Barber. "It must be fun to be a hunter.

"I s'pose it is," said the Manicure Lady. "But I'm a lot more interested in what Mister Roosevelt's book was to show you how much he is like the German Emperor. You know, George, the German Emperor goes hunting in the Black Forest, and last time Mister Roosevelt is kind to his guides, calls them by their first names, and last time Mister Wilhelm gets kind of sore every time a guide calls him anything but 'Your Majesty.' And the Kaiser shoots at, and calls him a 'Dirty Beast,' and so forth.

"They are both great men," said the Head Barber.

"Yes," admitted the Manicure Lady, "but Mister Roosevelt is the greatest, because he believes in increasing the human race, and wiping out the animals. His good sense about mere suicide has made reputation higher in the United States, and he has killed at least four bears. Name me a bigger man, George."

"I can think of only two," said the Head Barber, "Big Jim Jeffries and Big Bill Taft."

THE KELIHER CHORUS

Hark! Hear the bold-faced Beef Trust sing.
List to the lilt of the Whiskey Ring.
Fake-drug Maker his measure lends.
Keliher knows 'em, for they're his friends.

Chorus by Adulteration Trio.

"Who are we for? Why, Keliher. Yes, Keliher looks good.
He helped to boost the game for us. He boosted all he could.
He tried to kill the pure-food bill in spite of all the fuss.
Yes, he's the candy kid, none else. It's Keliher for us."

Hark! Hear the Jap and his wild refrain.
Wants to be boss of the bounding main.
He doesn't care if the U. S. A.
Has smaller navy than he to-day.

Jap Solo.

"Is Keliher a friend of mine? Well, I should rather guess.
So long as he is on the job my fear grows less and less
Of Uncle Sam whose naval force Friend Keliher routrains;
So here's a health to Keliher and thank him for his pains."

Strike-breaker joins in the chorus gay,
And C. M. Post also wants to say:
"I like you, Keliher, yes, I do."
The Steel Trust echoes: "Me, too; Me, too."

Anti-Labor Trio
In Glad Refrain.

"... we are foes of labor then we must ... friends of Kel.
For he can trim the unions to a final fare-ye-well.
He's for injunctions. So are we. They save a lot of muss.
We know our friends and so we know it's KELIHER
FOR US."

NEARLY 40,000 DRILLING FOR HOLY NAME PARADE

Major Leonard Tells Details of Big Demonstration of the Diocesan Centenary.

That the parade of the Holy Name Societies of the archdiocese of Boston, on Sunday, November 1, is to be the greatest demonstration of its kind, that more men will be in the line of march than were ever seen before at one time in the history of Boston, Major John J. Leonard, grand marshal of the parade, to-day confidently predicted to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN.

"We will have at least 35,000 men in our Holy Name parade," said Major Leonard. "I believe that we will have not less than 40,000, but I have confined my estimates to the best figures I could get from the different division marshals.

"I never saw such enthusiasm taken in any undertaking before. We have had to revise our estimates from time to time and the parade has outgrown anything we ever thought of. Our figures, those I take, are accurate, too.

In Twelve-File Front.

"The parade will start at 12:45—that means 12:45—in the afternoon, and I have estimated that it will take at least five hours to pass Archbishop William H. O'Connell's reviewing stand.

"That, too, in column of twelve-file fronts. If we were to march in columns of fours it would take six or seven hours for the Holy Name Societies to cover the one-hour route of the parade.

"For six weeks all of the Holy Name societies in the archdiocese of Boston have been drilling to perfect themselves in marching twelve-file fronts. It is a difficult formation, but the different division marshals have reported to me that they will have one of the best-drilled parades ever seen in Boston.

"The men are all to dress in black, with white gloves and derby hats. I have asked that no canes be carried. No insignia other than the banners of the different organizations and the flag of our country are to be carried.

"There are to be fourteen divisions in the parade. My staff will be at the right of line, of course. We will be mounted, the division marshals and the divisions are to march afoot. Now I will show you exactly where I expect to get 35,000 men for the greatest parade Boston has ever seen.

Fourteen Divisions.

"The divisions, which are to follow the staff, their marshals and the number of men estimated to march in each are as follows:

"First Division—Boston and Roxbury, Joseph A. Sheehan, marshal; 5,500 men.

"Second—South Boston, Robert N. Daly, marshal; 3,000 men.

"Third—East Boston, Captain George J. Lorett, marshal; 1,500 men.

"Fourth—Charlestown, Everett and Somerville, John F. O'Brien, marshal; 3,000 men.

"Fifth—Dorchester, Peter F. Hanley marshal; 1,800 men.

"Sixth—Newton, William J. Doherty, marshal; 2,000 men.

"Seventh—Cambridge, Patrick F. Carley, marshal; 4,000 men.

"Eighth—Hyde Park, Joseph E. Farrell, marshal; 1,200 men.

"Ninth—Brookline, William G. Clifford, marshal; 3,000 men.

Maj. Leonard, Grand Marshal of Holy Name Parade Nov. 1

"Tenth—Lynn, James J. Lemmon, marshal; 2,800 men.

"Eleventh—Melrose, Medford, Malden, Woburn, Reading and Wakefield, Colonel Edward J. Gilson, marshal; 1,500 men.

"Twelfth—Lowell, Hugh J. Mulloy, marshal; 1,500 men.

"Thirteenth—Lawrence, Hon. John Breen, marshal; 1,800 men.

"Fourteenth—South Framingham, Major Daniel J. Murphy, marshal; 800 men.

To Meet Division Marshals.

"To-morrow night at our headquarters in the building of the Catholic Order of Foresters, No. 17 Worcester street, I will meet my division marshals for the last meeting. We will then complete all of the preparations for this demonstration in honor of the Most Holy Name of Jesus.

"Everything is practically ready now for the final demonstration which is to mark the one-day celebration of the centenary of the archdiocese of Boston and New England.

"There are to be five first aid stations at different points of the parade, where any persons who may fall sick or possibly injured may be taken. There will be at least one trained physician and surgeon at each station, and no less than two trained nurses are to aid the physicians at the different stations.

"The police department will co-operate with us. I have seen Superintendent Pierce, and he has promised to have police ambulances at hand all along the parade where they may be in easy call if needed.

Route of Procession.

"The route of the procession will be from the junction of Massachusetts avenue and Boylston street, as follows: Beacon street, Bay State road, Ashby street, Commonwealth avenue and Arlington street.

"The parade will be reviewed by Archbishop O'Connell, and his distinguished guests are to review the parade from the archiepiscopal residence at Granby street and Bay State road. The head of the column will reach the Archbishop's house, I believe, at 1:30.

"With my staff I will review the parade at Berkeley street and Commonwealth avenue. My general staff is to report to me at Berkeley from 12 o'clock. The parade must start promptly on account of its length. At first we had arranged that the files were to follow each other at a distance of eight paces. On account of the unexpected number of men who will be in line of march, we have decreased these intervals by one half.

MR. MELLEN'S JOKE MAKES 'EM ALL LAUGH

His Explanation of How He Got Around Massachusetts Trolley Law.

The Street had a little laugh to-day after reading the official accounts sent out regarding the New Haven annual meeting, held in New Haven, especially at President Mellen's little joke in explaining how he evaded the laws of Massachusetts in buying up most of the competing trolley lines in the western part of the State.

The motion of J. Pierpont Morgan, the directors approved the sale of eight directors of the road in getting rid of 1,000 shares of trolley securities in the New England Investment Company, the offices of which are in the South Terminal station. These eight directors are now the richer by eleven board.

Yet Mr. Mellen surely explained to the stockholders that the "transfer of ownership" of these illegally acquired trolley properties was practically done by the directors "in order to shift the securities into the hands of INDIVIDUALS, in deference to the sentiment in Massachusetts against DIRECT OR INDIRECT ownership of trolley lines by the New Haven company."

"Road Had a Bad Year."

State street bankers fall to see how the road owned "individually" now, more than it was when in the treasury of the New England Navigation Company, which, like the Investment Company, is owned by the New Haven, the directors being almost identical.

Mr. Mellen admitted that his road had had a bad year, and in consideration of the fact he suggested last year that the eight per cent. dividend could not be maintained unless he earnings were increased soon, financiers are wondering if there is to be another slash in the quarterly cut.

There are also puzzling their heads to-day over the Standard Oil group now in possession of the Boston & Maine railroad, and the right to "improve the B. & M." property, which Rockefeller, two of the Standard Oil group and Rockefeller, two of the board, go down in their own pockets.

President Mellen was rushed pointedly by former Alderman A. M. Hiller of New Haven when he was down with the 140,000 shares of Boston & Maine stock owned by his corporation.

To "Friendly Interests."

Mr. Mellen responded with his old time denial. "The New Haven never owned a share of Boston & Maine stock." Yet its stock went up 12½ and the "Friendly Interests" will turn into the treasury of the New Haven road the $11,000,000 RECEIVED when the "FRIENDLY INTERESTS WHICH ARE FRIENDLY TO YOUR ROAD."

The old board of directors was elected, with William Rockefeller and J. P. Morgan heading the list, as of yore.

The Maine Central stockholders also held their annual meeting at Portland yesterday. The road is owned by the Boston & Maine and Jesse L. Billard of Meriden, who holds the Boston & Maine stock owned by the New Haven people, great is he, who orders to President Tuttle to increase the board from twelve to fourteen members. Lewis Cass Ledyard stepped out, Brainbway of New Haven and Frank L. Dodge of Norwich, Ct., added to the list. Brainbway is the New Haven lawyer and Dodge, partner of Billard, the Meriden banker, partner of Billard, the Meriden banker, partner of Billard, the Meriden banker

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

CRIMSON WARRIORS OFF FOR ANNAPOLIS

For the first time this season the Harvard varsity football team gets away from the Stadium to play on hostile soil, as the players and coaches will have an early supper tonight and catch the Federal Express for Baltimore, where they remain till it is time to assail the Midshipmen at Annapolis on Saturday.

It is the crucial game of the season, so far for the Crimson, and the student body will anxiously await the returns of the battle, as much stress will be put on the showing of Coach Haughton's charges as by the way they display their football knowledge against the Middies.

A royal sendoff is on tap in Harvard square when the special car leaves the bridge for the Back Bay station at 7.15 o'clock and each and every one of the players, and there are twenty-seven going on the trip, will come in for some hearty cheers, as well as the coaches and trainers.

This afternoon the scrimmage work was cut out for the head coach, as no drills were being taken to lay up any of the stars at the eleventh hour and have a break up the Crimson plays, something fearful on the card to surprise the Middies who are counting on a Johnny Harvard spill.

The student body is confident that Harvard will win in spite of the Middies' expectations of giving the Crimson a closer fight than last year when they piled up a big college eleven to a score of 6 to 0.

With such a valuable man as Captain Burr in the kicking line the Navy is up against it for no matter how long their defence Burr's booting and possible field goals will cause havoc to their hopes.

Coach Haughton does not expect to run up the same nine scores the team has been making against some of the minor colleges played this season at Cambridge, but will be satisfied if the team shows a winning form which will continue to exist till after the Big Six struggle.

He will not be the strongest possible line-up that will be sent against the Middies as he realizes it won't do to let the Harvard stars get hurt and upset calculations.

It will be Yale style of football which the Harvard team will face, as the Middies have been drilled under Jack Dates and Ray Bowen, two Eli veterans who have dumped into Annapolis' camp all they ever learned at New Haven.

Coach Haughton will use the lineup which has produced the most of the games played in the Stadium, with Gil Browne and Curling on the ends, McKay and Fish tackles, Bure and Burr guards and Nourse centre, Cutler quarterback, Corbett, White and Kennard in the backfield.

Twenty-seven players, Manager Egleston, Assistant Managers Amory and Scudder, Trainer Donovan and Rubbers Mahoney, Mc-Closky and Connerty; "Sammeck" Ryan, Charles Haughton, Daly, Campbell, Kersberg and Nesmith, Nichols and Dr. Ladd will constitute the party of Harvard men who will leave for Baltimore tonight.

The players are Captain Burr, G. G. Browne, Crowley, Corbett, Cutler, Curtling, Inman, Fish, Forshimer, Galatti, Gray, Harding, Haddon, Hoar, Houston, Jewett, Kennard, Leslie, McGuire, Long, Nourse, Smith, Ver Wiebe, White, Wilbington, McKay and Robinson.

Addie Joss, Cleveland's Great Pitcher, Says Cubs Won Because

THEY ARE FAST ON BASES

Addie Joss, the great Cleveland pitcher, in writing of the world's series, says:

While there can be no doubt of the fact that the throwing of Catcher Schmidt of the Tigers, in the world's series, was far from being perfect, still he was not altogether to blame for the way the Cubs ran bases on him.

Every member of the Chicago team, with the possible exception of Steinfeldt, are wonderfully fast men on the paths, and this, coupled with the fact that they have made the art of base running one of the features of their wonderful team play, makes them hard to stop on the lines.

The one great secret of their ability to run the bases so successfully comes from the fact that they are constantly on the alert.

They seem to make a study of the opposing pitcher and the manner in which he delivers the ball. Then each one of them reaches first he immediately marks a bluff to start for second on the first ball pitched and by so doing keeps the entire team to discover who is to cover second.

If the hit and run play is tried then the batter knows who is to take the throw and he can try to hit through the spot vacated.

Always Get a Flying Lead.

When a clean steal is attempted the base runner always gets a flying lead. From their work on the paths it is safe to presume that the Cubs figure this way: Better to be caught off first a few times during a series than to get a bad start and always be thrown out at second.

There is a good deal of logic in this and right here, let it be said, that many a time when a player is caught off what is generally thought to be his lead many times he has got a good start and is only caught because the opposing pitcher has called the play on him.

Coupled with their ability to get a good start and their fleetness of foot the world's champions have all mastered the art of sliding into a base.

All Slide Spikes First.

With the exception of Kling, who always slides head first, the Cubs all slide feet first and can go into a base either way. That is, if the throw happens to be on the inside of the bag they slide on the outside, and vice versa.

This leaves nothing for the infielder to touch but the spikes, which in no way lessens his nose too easy task.

The peculiarly unfavorable thing about their base running was the fact that most of the time they started to steal when the batter had two strikes on him.

Several times during the series they attempted this, probably figuring that it would be the unexpected and that the pitcher, not looking for such a move, would put the ball where the batter had a chance to hit it.

Where Thomas Fooled 'Em.

This was tried a couple of times in the games in Chicago and once, evidently the Cubs did not know that the Highlanders used to work this all the time, and as Thomas was once a member of that club, it was just what he was looking for, and by such instances he was able to make the base runner easily.

Baseball games are saved in the field and won at bat and on the bases. No matter how good a team may be in the field or clever may be their twirlers, few games will be won if their bat list is on the blink.

The Cubs seem to get lots of runs for the number of hits they make, and this is only due to the fact that they are one of the grandest base running clubs ever put on any field.

AUTO DEALERS OUTING VOTED GREAT SUCCESS

BY J. C. KERRISON.

The annual pow-wow and love feast of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association, held at the Ashland Country Club last evening, proved interesting and enjoyable. Every one, from President MacAlman down to the youngest member, W. P. McQuillan, was in fine feather, and the manner in which they "knocked" and hammered each other was a revelation to those unfamiliar with the habits of the motor dealers when they get away from dull business cares and sorrows. They were just like a crowd of schoolboys out for a recess, and figuratively they played ball with each other, the repartee at times being both brilliant and decidedly pointed.

President MacAlman started the ball rolling, and immediately upon the lighting of cigars called upon that modest man Harry Fosdick, who had come up from New York to join the banqueters and tell us the fine points of his new proposition. Mr Fosdick was keen as a razor and gave way to none in his knowledge of the game and his ability to give and take a joke.

At the first crack out of the box he presented the presiding genius with a bullet of good large size, and that this was sufficient for the evening's work he handed him a sharpened knife and like-wise a hatchet, both of which he used for various and diversified purposes. But MacAlman was ever to the good with his ability to hand back, and all night long he did a good, finished job, none escaping him by shafts of brilliant eloquence.

Mr. McQuillan gave a brief characteristic and amusing story of his life among automobile dealers, while Messrs. Bowman and Skinner, the two great hunters of the tribe, had a few kind words for all and told of their mighty work in the woods of Maine and New Brunswick, where the deer and moose are running yet as a result of their work with the rifle. A. E. Gilmore, Mr. Gill, Vice-President Whitney, R. W. Daniels, William Gray, C. E. Whitten, A. E. Measure, and the other brilliant lights of the local trade all had their little jokes to say and said it well. It was well on toward midnight when the last word had been said and the party started for home over the roads. The going through the Newtons was decidedly slow, owing to the dense smoke that hung so low and heavy as to prevent one's seeing the road two feet ahead, and being so thick as to be impenetrable even by the powerful gas lights of the cars.

Those who enjoyed this annual Fall feast included J. H. MacAlman, F. C. Wing, E. A. Gilmore, A. E. Adams, C

Funny Monkeys, Kings and Princes Are

And Funny Monkeys Are the Americans That Long for Monkey-Prince Honors

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

A young American girl, energetic and determined, with a father capable of giving her a good brain as well as a good fortune, is going to marry an Italian prince—if nothing happens.

All the civilized peoples, all the earth's continents, principal islands and principal newspapers are agitated because of this coming marriage.

An American fortune, growing; a European prince, fading out, are to be united—and all the world wonders.

Funny situation, comical wonder.

A King of Italy, doing what he can to make a sad situation brighter, is going to make the American girl a princess very soon. Thus the prince will marry a princess WITH an American fortune. That won't be quite so bad.

Old Garibaldi, in his red shirt, came to America and lived in a shanty on Staten Island not so long ago. That is the Garibaldi who MADE the King of Italy a king; he is the man who put the crown on the head of the young King now reigning.

Red-shirted Garibaldi, the common fighter, is really the man that is going to make a princess of Miss Elkins. That is interesting to think about, isn't it?

One REAL MAN, Garibaldi, giving union and liberty to Italy, modestly retiring, makes another man king of a united people. Now the King makes a young lady who owns an American fortune a princess.

Then our old friend King Edward of England—he also is agitated. That dear old soul, gentle and fat, mild and forgiving, intimately acquainted with quite a good many sinners, is shocked in the depths his Guelph temperament by the news that a Garibaldi-made prince intends to marry a common American. It is announced on behalf of the King that he has now forbidden his own niece, Patricia—did you ever hear of her before?—to marry the brother of the Duke of Abruzzi.

The King says, in effect, to poor Count of Turin: "You can't marry my niece, for your brother is going to marry an American, and thus MY family would be related to them—oh, dear, no!"

"Americans are all very well as dollar machines. I can eat their dinners, deal myself gilded cards over their green cloths and amuse myself with them generally. But I couldn't think of being related to them—oh, dear, no."

Funny human beings we all are! A princely monkey of Europe reaches out for the gilded cocoanut of the American monkey. And the American money-monkey reaches out for the gilded crown topknot of the European prince-monkey, and by and by there will be a race of little, skinny, knock-kneed, mongrel babies spending American dollars and wearing fine European clothes, and all the world sits up intensely interested.

Probably it's a necessary part of mysterious progress. Let us hope so.

The Case of Pouren: HE WON'T GO BACK TO RUSSIA

A Reader Would Like to Know "The Proofs of His Innocence"

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

We have told you something about Pouren, the Russian friend of liberty, locked up as an ordinary criminal by the United States government at the request of Russia.

One of our readers—sincere, no doubt—asks: "How do you KNOW that Pouren isn't an ordinary criminal, as the Russian government describes him? How do you KNOW that he is a friend of liberty?"

Our reader might have asked, when Garibaldi came to this country, "How do you know Garibaldi is not a criminal?"

The very fact that Russia asks for Pouren and uses every effort of diplomacy to get him PROVES HIM A HATER OF OPPRESSION, AND THAT HE IS AN INNOCENT MAN.

Does Russia use such efforts to get any of the thousands of ordinary criminals that leave her shores? No; she is only too glad to get rid of them. A common criminal in such a country as Russia, which drives even honest men to crime, is no rarity. The Czar and the brutes that serve him are not reaching eagerly across 3,000 miles of water to seize, with our government's help, an ordinary little thief.

Pouren's record is as clear as that of Garibaldi, as clear as that of Kosciusko—as clear and as honorable as that of any man that ever fought tyranny USING THE WEAPONS THAT TYRANNY FORCES UPON ITS VICTIMS.

Seventy thousand men and women in this country have signed their names to a petition for Pouren's release, and other thousands are signing.

Will the United States government that keeps Pouren in jail pretend that these 70,000 men and women are banded together to free a criminal? Tens of thousands of these men and women came from Russia, flying from the persecution against which Pouren fought. Do they not know better than Commissioner Shields the character of the man that Shields would send back to be tortured and then hanged?

Does Mr. Roosevelt, who has the final say, believe that 70,000 men and women, as honest and sincere as himself, could be persuaded to sign a petition for a man UNLESS THAT MAN'S RECORD WERE CLEAR AND HONORABLE?

And it is not alone upon the petition of 70,000 that those who study the case of Pouren must rely.

There stands on the records an official report to the Duma—A REPORT NOT DISCREDITED—in which certain atrocities were described. Mr. Roosevelt, who controls Pouren's fate, may not have read it, but others HAVE read that story about the little girl, eight years old, flogged by Cossacks TO MAKE HER REVEAL THE HIDING PLACE OF HER FATHER.

That child is the daughter of Pouren, now locked up in the Tombs in New York City by the government of the United States at the request of Russia.

Does the Russian government flog a child of eight years to find out the hiding place of a common criminal, a man who has only committed crimes against property? No, not even Russia does that.

When they flog a child in Russia they want to learn the hiding place of some man that menaces Russian autocracy.

Is the government of the United States going to send Pouren back to the Cossacks that flogged his child? We think not—not even to enable Mr. Root to oblige the Russian government and so to get favors for the trusts that have so long hired him.

Pouren will GO FREE. Mr. Roosevelt will not tell 70,000 men and women that he believes them to be liars or hysterical fools.

But who is to make up to Pouren for his months of imprisonment as a common criminal? And what of the shameful affront put upon this country that calls itself the home of liberty and a refuge for the oppressed?

We would earnestly advise Mr. Roosevelt to ignore the private plans of Mr. Root, to overrule the decision of the omniscient Mr. Shields, who thinks that a Russian patriot must be a Russian criminal because the Czar's government says so, AND TO RELEASE POUREN NOW.

Pouren will be released. Why wait longer?

"YES, said Mr. Chanler, "it's without foundation and totally unauthorized."

Every lover of personal liberty will vote the Democratic ticket next month, except those whose liberty is unfortunately curtailed by bars and steel doors up the river.

"Reports from Empire City and Latonia indicate that I will carry New York by the greatest plurality ever known."

* * *

"Of course I shall live in the White House with Mr. Bryan," declared John W. Kern. "It will be pleasant for both of us, and I can offer a cot to my friend Taggart when he visits up to talk over Federal appointments or legislative matters.

"Our election is a foregone conclusion. I have the solid paint-brush and toothbrush vote and the united support of the bank officials of French Lick Springs. Yes, French Lick is a great banking centre—faro banks all around."

"The report is quite true," said Secretary Loeb last night. "President Roosevelt, after reducing the visible supply of lions in Africa, will come to New York and assume the editorial management of the Lookout.

* * *

"As editor, Mr. Roosevelt will write 250,000-word messages to the subscribers, if there are any. Should there be no subscribers, the messages will be directed to the Lookout's staff, which will be made up of wolf-catchers and sprinters."

* * *

"President Roosevelt will not become an editor," said Secretary Loeb to-day. "All statements that he will are utterly without foundation and totally unauthorized."

* * *

"President Roosevelt will join our staff next year," said the editor of the Lookout. "He will be in charge of the farm and the family departments and will answer queries on the subjects of how to make farm life resemble life on Broadway and how many children are plenty."

* * *

"President Roosevelt," said Secretary Loeb late to-night, "has not decided whether or not he will accept the Lookout's offer of $50,000 a month to take charge of its home and agricultural departments. No statement of any kind has been authorized. If I made any before, I was dippy."

"Surest thing you know," said Tommy Tippitt. "Sure I borrowed $250,000 on my note. Say, it was easy! All I done was to sign my name and the boss got the money. Naw, I didn't get none of it; all I got was $6 a week."

* * *

"It will be a landslide," declared Mr. Bryan. "We will fairly smother the Republicans with the aid of the labor vote. Gompers assures me that every public beggar in the country will vote for me."

"The country is undergoing a brief period of depression," said Job n D. Archbold. "The demand for Senators is very dull at present, but I have every confidence in the future. As soon as the result of election and the disgraceful hubbub over some perfectly legitimate transactions in Senators and Representatives have subsided, I expect to see trading pick up wonderfully."

Mistakes Will Happen

"NOW look a' here, Archbold," said wrathful John D., "I thought you sent something to Mack

To help out the Peerless, who means to be fearless in shielding us trusts from attack!"

"Sure thing," replied Archbold. "Despite what we've lost in the recent deplorable crash,

I gladly came through with a ducat or two—namely, three hundred thousand in cash!"

"THEN what is the meaning," pursued the old man in heavily gloom-laden tones,

"Of their noising about that we only fried out to the tune of a measly two bones? In the statement that Ridder begs men to consider—and deeply and closely I've read it—

Concerning the pelf on the Limburger shelf, that two stands alone to our credit!"

"GEE! Chief," murmured Archbold, "I little like that! I knew that if Bryan got in He'd Peerlessly stand for our whole blooming band, so I bustled to help him to win.

I'll drop Mack a line—for we sure must divine just where is that money before it's, alas! all too late—if it's lost—to go straight to the cash drawer and send him some more!"

"DEAR Chief," whispered Archbold, the following day, "about that remembrance to Mack—

He got it all right, and the Peerless has quite decided he won't send it back. Mack writes to me thus: 'You must excuse us, you couldn't be treated as fairer;

That your three hundred thou' appeared two was, I vow, an unfortunate clerical error!'"
